West Virginia Employment Law

COVERAGE

Scope of Discussion. This publication is designed to help employers operating in a state to identify and apply various state employment law requirements. It follows the chronology of employment—tracking requirements from pre-hire, time of hire, during employment, and the end of employment. Because employers are subject to both federal and state employment laws, each section provides a brief overview of federal law and then summarizes applicable state law.

Although the major developments in West Virginia employment law are generally covered, this publication is not all-inclusive and the current status of any decision or principle of law should be verified by counsel. In addition:

- This publication focuses on requirements for private-sector employers; requirements applicable solely to public employers are not covered. Similarly, while some provisions applicable to government contractors may be covered, this publication is not designed to address requirements applicable only to government contractors.
- Local ordinances are generally excluded from this publication. Notwithstanding, local rules may be included to the extent they deal with ban-the-box or criminal history restrictions, local minimum wage, paid sick leave, or antidiscrimination provisions. A detailed discussion of these requirements, however, is outside the scope of this publication. Further, the focus of local ordinances is primarily on jurisdictions with populations of 100,000 or more residents, but laws in locations with populations below that threshold may also be included.
- State law may create special rules or provide exceptions to existing rules for certain industries—for example, the health care industry. This publication does not offer an exhaustive look at these industry-specific exceptions and should not be interpreted to cover all industry-specific requirements.
- Civil and criminal penalties for failure to follow any particular state employment law requirement may be covered to the extent the penalty is specifically included and discussed in the statute. Any penalty discussion that is included, however, is nonexhaustive and may only highlight some of the possible penalties under the statute. In many instances, an individual statute will not include its own penalty provision; rather, a general or catchall penalty provision will apply, and these are not covered here.

To adhere to publication deadlines, developments, and decisions subsequent to October 11, 2024 are not covered.

1. PRE-HIRE

1.1 Classifying Workers: Employees v. Independent Contractors

1.1(a) Federal Guidelines on Classifying Workers

A person providing services to another for payment generally can be classified either as an employee or an independent contractor. An independent contractor is considered self-employed, whereas an employee, as the term suggests, works for an employer. The choice between classifying a worker as an independent contractor or an employee is more than a question of terminology and can have many and far-reaching consequences for a company. A company's legal obligation to its workers under various employment and labor laws depends primarily on whether workers are employees. For example, a company using an independent contractor is not required to:

- withhold income taxes from payments for service;
- pay minimum wages mandated by state or federal law;
- provide workers' compensation coverage or unemployment insurance;
- provide protections for various leaves of absences required by law; or
- provide a wide range of employee benefits, such as paid time off or a 401(k) retirement plan, that are offered voluntarily to the employer's employees as part of the terms or conditions of their employment.

As independent contractor use increased, government officials began to scrutinize asserted independent contractor relationships with increasing skepticism. Courts have also proven willing to overturn alleged independent contractor relationships that fail to satisfy the increasingly rigorous standards applied by federal and state agencies for classifying workers as independent contractors.

For companies, misclassification of a worker as an independent contractor can carry significant tax, wage, and benefit liabilities, as well as unanticipated and perhaps under-insured tort liability to third parties for injuries caused by the worker.

There are four principal tests used to determine whether a worker is an employee or an independent contractor:

1. the common-law rules or common-law control test;[1]
2. the economic realities test (with several variations);[2]

[1] The common-law rules or common-law control test, informed in part by the Internal Revenue Service's 20 factors, focus on whether the engaging entity has the right to control the means by which the worker performs their services as well as the end results. See generally Treas. Reg. § 31.3121(d)-(1)(c); I.R.S., Internal Revenue Manual, Technical Guidelines for Employment Tax Issues, 4.23.5.4, et seq. (Nov. 22, 2017), available at https://www.irs.gov/irm/part4/irm_04-023-005r.html#d0e183.

[2] In addition to an evaluation of the right to control how the work is to be performed, the economic realities test also requires an examination of the underlying "economic realities" of the work relationship—namely, do the workers "depend upon someone else's business for the opportunity to render service or are [they] in business for themselves." Brock v. Superior Care, Inc., 840 F.2d 1054, 1059 (2d Cir. 1988); see also Rutherford Food Corp. v. McComb, 331 U.S. 722 (1947).

3. the hybrid test, combining the common law and economic realities test;[3] and
4. the ABC test (or variations of this test).[4]

For a detailed evaluation of the tests and how they apply to the various federal laws, see LITTLER ON CLASSIFYING WORKERS.

1.1(b) State Guidelines on Classifying Workers

In West Virginia, as elsewhere, an individual who provides services to another for payment generally is considered either an independent contractor or an employee. For the most part, the distinction between an independent contractor and an employee is dependent on the applicable state law (see Table 1).

Table 1. State Tests for Classifying Workers

Purpose of Determining Employee Status	State Agency	Test to Apply
Fair Employment Practices Laws	West Virginia Human Rights Commission	The state Employment Law Worker Classification Act established a test for workers' compensation, unemployment compensation, the Human Rights Act, and wage payment and collection purposes. Under the Act, a person is an independent contractor for purposes of those laws if they sign a written agreement that states the principal's intent to engage the person as an independent contractor and contains acknowledgments that the person understands that they are: • providing services as an independent contractor; • not going to be treated as an employee; • not going to be provided with either workers' compensation or unemployment compensation benefits; • obligated to pay all applicable federal and state income taxes, and that the principal will not make any tax withholdings; and

[3] Under the hybrid test, a court evaluates the entity's right to control the individual's work process, but also looks at additional factors related to the worker's economic situation—such as how the work relationship may be terminated, whether the worker receives yearly leave or accrues retirement benefits, and whether the entity pays social security taxes on the worker's behalf. Wilde v. County of Kandiyohi, 15 F.3d 103, 105 (8th Cir. 1994). Because the hybrid test focuses on traditional agency notions of control, as a general rule, it results in a narrower definition of employee than under a pure economic realities test. Hopkins v. Cornerstone Am., 545 F.3d 338, 347 (5th Cir. 2008).

[4] Under a typical formulation of the ABC test, a worker is an independent contractor if: (A) there is an ABSENCE of control; (B) the BUSINESS is performed outside the usual course of business or performed away from the place of business; and (C) the work is CUSTOMARILY performed by independent contractors.

		• responsible for the majority of supplies and other variable expenses unless the expenses are for travel that is not local, the expenses are reimbursed under an express provision of the contract, or the supplies or expenses reimbursed are commonly reimbursed under industry practice. The agreement must also contain acknowledgments that the person: • has either filed, or is contractually required to file, an income tax return with the appropriate federal, state, and local agencies for a business or for earnings from self-employment; or • provides their services through a business entity, or through a sole proprietorship registered with a "doing business as" as required under state or local law. Further, with the exception of the exercise of control necessary to ensure compliance with regulatory, or other similar obligations, or to protect persons or property, or to protect a franchise brand, the person must actually and directly control the manner and means by which the work is to be accomplished, even though they may not have control over the final result of the work. A person is also an independent contractor if they meet the definition of a direct seller under Section 3508(b)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code or satisfy three or more of the following criteria: • with certain exceptions, the person has control over the amount of time personally spent providing services; • with certain exceptions, the person is not required to work exclusively for one principal; • the person is free to exercise independent initiative in soliciting others to purchase their services; • the person is free to hire employees or to contract with assistants, helpers, or substitutes to perform all or some of the work; • the person cannot be required to perform additional services without a new or modified contract;

The Act also provides that the classification of workers who do not satisfy the above criteria will be determined by the test set forth in Internal Revenue Service Revenue Ruling 87-41.[5] Previously, there were no relevant statutory definitions or case law identifying a test for independent contractor status in this context.

		as described above under Fair Employment Practices Laws.[8] Previously, the state used a statutory test, adopting the ABC test. Services performed by an individual were presumed to be employment unless it was shown that: "(A) The individual has been and will continue to be free from control or direction over the performance of the services, both under his or her contract of service and in fact; and (B) the service is either outside the usual course of the business for which the service is performed or that such service is performed outside of all the places of business of the enterprise for which such service is performed; and (C) the individual is customarily engaged in an independently established trade, occupation, profession or business[.]"[9]
Wage & Hour Laws	West Virginia Department of Commerce, Division of Labor, Wage & Hour	The state Employment Law Worker Classification Act established a test for unemployment insurance purposes, as described above under Fair Employment Practices Laws.[10] Previously, there were no state statutory definitions or state case law identifying a test for independent contractor status in this context. However, a West Virginia federal court applied a four-factor test considering the following: 1. selection and engagement of the servant; 2. payment of compensation; 3. power of dismissal; and 4. power of control.[11]

		"The first three factors are not essential to the existence of the relationship; the fourth, the power of control, is determinative."[12]
Workers' Compensation	West Virginia Offices of the Insurance Commissioner	The state Employment Law Worker Classification Act established a test for unemployment insurance purposes, as described above under Fair Employment Practices Laws.[13] Previously, there were two different statutory tests for independent contractor status. One applied to workers in nonhazardous industry and the other in hazardous industry. As an initial matter, individuals performing services for compensation were presumed to be employees and must be covered by a West Virginia workers' compensation insurance policy unless it was shown that the worker was an independent contractor. "The burden of proving that an individual is an independent contractor is at all times, on the party asserting independent contractor status."[14] Nonhazardous Industry. To overcome the presumption of employee status, all of the following criteria must have been met: 1. the individual possesses a license, permit, or other certification required for engaging in the type of work performed by the individual; 2. there is a written contract between the individual and the entity establishing that the individual is an independent contractor and not an employee, and that workers' compensation coverage will not be provided for the individual; and independent contractor status as used in the context of torts and respondeat superior by the West Virginia Supreme Court in Paxton v. Crabtree, 400 S.E.2d 245, 252 (W. Va. 1990), to the determination of independent contractor status under the West Virginia Wage Payment and Collection Act.

		3. the individual has primary control over the time, means, and manner of the work performed. While the entity may specify the "particular project or type of work to be done and a certain time frame for the work to be completed," it "cannot exert control over the day-to-day schedule of the individual or continuously supervise the individual as a boss would in an employment situation."[15] Hazardous Industry. To overcome the presumption of employee status, all of the following criteria must have been met: 1. the "individual holds himself or herself out to be in business for himself or herself" (e.g., possesses a license, permit, or other certification; enters into contracts for the work performed; and/or the right, under contractual provisions, to "regularly solicit business from different persons or entities to perform for compensation the type of work that is being performed by the individual"); 2. the individual has control over when work is performed, although this criterion does not prohibit the entity from coming to agreement with the individual on a "completion schedule, range of work hours, and maximum number of work hours to be provided by the individual"); 3. the individual has control "over the means and manner of performance of the work being performed and in achieving the result of the work" (i.e., no ongoing supervision by the entity, but rather, that the individual is given "a description and expectation of the work to be performed;" the fact that an entity

[15] W. VA. CODE R. § 85-8-6.2(b). West Virginia courts will liberally construe workers' compensation provisions in favor of the claimant-individual and employee status. C&H Taxi Co. v. Richardson, 461 S.E.2d 442, 448 (W. Va. 1995). Citing a long line of West Virginia case law, the West Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals observed in Bowens v. Allied Warehousing Services, 729 S.E.2d 845 (W. Va. 2012), "while it is necessary to consider the entire circumstances of the relationship, the right to exercise control and supervision is the determinative element." The existence of the right to control, rather than actual use, is the determining factor. Myers v. Workmen's Comp. Comm'r, 148 S.E.2d 664, 667 (W. Va. 1966). If the right to supervise work exists, an employer-employee relationship exists; if the right does not exist, an independent contractor relationship exists. 148 S.E.2d at 667. The method of payment remains relevant, but it is not conclusive; if paid hourly or by a unit of time, this is strong evidence of an employer-employee relationship. 148 S.E.2d at 667.

Workplace Safety	Not applicable	There are no relevant statutory definitions or case law identifying a test for independent contractor status in this context. West Virginia does not have an approved state plan under the federal Occupational Safety and Health Act.[17]

1.2 Employment Eligibility & Verification Requirements

1.2(a) Federal Guidelines on Employment Eligibility & Verification Requirements

The federal Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 (IRCA) prohibits knowingly employing workers who are not authorized to work in the United States. Under IRCA, an employer must verify each new hire's identity and employment eligibility. Employers and employees must complete the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Service's Employment Eligibility Verification form (Form I-9) to fulfill this requirement. The employer must ensure that: (1) the I-9 is complete; (2) the employee provides required documentation; and (3) the documentation appears on its face to be genuine and to relate to the employee. If an employee cannot present the required documents within three business days of hire, the employee cannot continue employment.

Although IRCA requires employers to review specified documents establishing an individual's eligibility to work, it provides no way for employers to verify the documentation's legitimacy. Accordingly, the federal government established the "E-Verify" program to allow employers to verify work authorization using a computerized registry. Employers that choose to participate in the program must enter into a Memorandum of Understanding with the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) which, among other things, specifically prohibits employers from using the program as a screening device. Participation in E-Verify is generally voluntary, except for federal contractors with prime federal contracts valued above the simplified acquisition threshold for work in the United States, and for subcontractors under those prime contracts where the subcontract value exceeds $3,500.[18]

Federal legislative attempts to address illegal immigration have been largely unsuccessful, leading some states to enact their own immigration initiatives. Whether states have the constitutional power to enact immigration-related laws or burden interstate commerce with requirements in addition to those imposed by IRCA largely depends on how a state law intends to use an individual's immigration status. Accordingly, state and local immigration laws have faced legal challenges.[19] An increasing number of states have enacted immigration-related laws, many of which mandate E-Verify usage. These state law E-Verify provisions, most of which include enforcement provisions that penalize employers through license suspension or revocation for knowingly or intentionally employing undocumented workers, have survived constitutional challenges.[20]

For more information on these topics, see LITTLER ON I-9 COMPLIANCE & WORK AUTHORIZATION VISAS.

1.2(b) State Guidelines on Employment Eligibility & Verification Requirements

1.2(b)(i) Private Employers

Employers are prohibited from knowingly employing, hiring, recruiting, or referring for private or public employment within the state an unauthorized worker. Failure to request or review documentation of an employee's legal status or authorization to work is deemed to be "knowingly" within the meaning of the statute.[21]

An employer must verify a prospective employee's legal status or authority to work prior to: (1) employing the individual; or (2) contracting with the individual for employment services. Proof of legal status or authorization to work includes, but is not limited to:

- a valid Social Security card;
- a valid immigrant or nonimmigrant visa, including photo identification;
- a valid birth certificate;
- a valid passport;
- a valid photo identification issued by a government agency;
- a valid work permit or supervision permit authorized by the Division of Labor;
- a valid permit issued by the Department of Justice; or,

- other valid document providing evidence of legal residence or authorization to work in the United States.[22]

Record-Keeping Requirements. Employers must document proof of each employee's legal status or authorization to work in the United States. Documents must be retained for two years after the employee has separated from employment. Documents must be stored at the place of employment or an established central record-keeping location where records are customarily maintained. Records must be made available to the West Virginia Labor Commissioner or their representative for inspection. The Labor Commissioner may also ask an employee's name and the name of their employer.[23]

1.2(b)(ii) State Contractors

Any service provider whose employees are regularly employed on the grounds or in the buildings of the Capitol Complex, or who have access to sensitive or critical information must submit to a fingerprint-based state and federal background inquiry through the state repository, and must require a new employee who is employed to provide services on the grounds or in the building of the Capitol Complex to submit to an employment eligibility check through E-Verify. A service provider is any person or company that provides employees to a state agency or entity of state government to work on the grounds or in the buildings that make up the Capitol Complex or who have access to sensitive or critical information.[24]

1.2(b)(iii) State Enforcement, Remedies & Penalties

Enforcement: Notice to Produce Documents. If the West Virginia Labor Commissioner believes that an employer has violated the rules pertaining to the prohibition of employing illegal aliens, the Labor Commissioner is authorized to issue a notice to employers to produce records or documents, describing with particularity the nature of the alleged violation. Employers have up to 72 hours or three business days to respond to the notice with the required documentation. A business day is any day other than a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday. If employers cannot provide documentation to satisfy the Labor Commissioner that there was no violation, the Labor Commissioner is directed to issue a citation describing with particularity the nature of the violation, which citation must then be presented to the magistrate or circuit judge in the county where the violation occurred.[25]

Penalties. An employer that knowingly employs, hires, recruits, or refers an unauthorized worker is guilty of a misdemeanor and subject to penalties, which vary depending on whether it is a first offense, second offense, or subsequent offense. For third or subsequent offenses, an employer may be jailed, in addition to or instead of being fined. An employer that knowingly and willfully provides false records of legal status or authorization to the West Virginia Labor Commissioner is guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by jail, a fine, or both.[26]

An employer that knowingly and willfully fails to maintain records as required by the immigration verification law is guilty of a misdemeanor, subject to a fine. Failure to keep records on each employee constitutes a separate offense.[27] In addition, an employer that knowingly and willfully and with fraudulent intent sells, transfers, or disposes of substantially all of its assets to evade the record-keeping requirements is guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by jail, a fine, or both.[28]

Denial of Deductible Business Expense. No wages or remuneration paid to an unauthorized worker of $600 or more per year may be allowed as a deductible business expense for state income tax purposes if the employer is convicted of employing, hiring, recruiting, or referring an unauthorized worker.[29]

Suspension & Revocation of License. The West Virginia Labor Commissioner may order the permanent revocation, or the suspension for a specific period of time, of any license held by the employer upon:

- a third conviction for knowingly employing, hiring, recruiting, or referring an unauthorized worker;
- conviction for providing false records of legal status or authorization; or
- conviction for knowingly and willfully transferring assets for the purpose of evading the record-keeping requirements.[30]

1.3 Restrictions on Background Screening & Privacy Rights in Hiring

1.3(a) Restrictions on Employer Inquiries About & Use of Criminal History

1.3(a)(i) Federal Guidelines on Employer Inquiries About & Use of Criminal History

There is no applicable federal law restricting employer inquiries into an applicant's criminal history. However, the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) has issued enforcement guidance pursuant to its authority under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 ("Title VII").[31] While there is uncertainty about the level of deference courts will afford the EEOC's guidance, employers should consider the EEOC's guidance related to arrest and conviction records when designing screening policies and practices. The EEOC provides employers with its view of "best practices" for implementing arrest or conviction screening policies in its guidance. In general, the EEOC's positions are:

1. Arrest Records. An exclusion from employment based on an arrest itself is not job related and consistent with business necessity as required under Title VII. While, from the EEOC's perspective, an employer cannot rely on arrest records alone to deny employment, an employer can consider the underlying conduct related to the arrest if that conduct makes the person unfit for the particular position.
2. Conviction Records. An employer with a policy that excludes persons from employment based on criminal convictions must show that the policy effectively links specific criminal conduct with risks related to the particular job's duties. The EEOC typically will consider three factors when analyzing an employer's policy: (1) the nature and gravity of the offense or conduct; (2) the time that has passed since the offense, conduct, and/or completion of the sentence; and (3) the nature of the job held or sought.

Employers should also familiarize themselves with the federal Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA), discussed in 1.3(b)(i). The FCRA does not restrict conviction-reporting per se, but impacts the reporting and consideration of criminal history information in other important ways.

For additional information on these topics, see LITTLER ON BACKGROUND SCREENING & PRIVACY RIGHTS IN HIRING.

1.3(a)(ii) State Guidelines on Employer's Use of Arrest Records

West Virginia places no statutory restrictions on a private employer's use of arrest records. In addition, West Virginia has not implemented a state "ban-the-box" law covering private employers.

1.3(a)(iii) State Guidelines on Employer's Use of Conviction Records

West Virginia places no statutory restrictions on a private employer's use of conviction records.

1.3(a)(iv) State Guidelines on Employer's Use of Sealed or Expunged Criminal Records

A person whose criminal records have been expunged does not have to disclose that a record exists or any matter relating to the record on an application for employment or any other type of application.[32]

Juvenile Records. Employers cannot discriminate against any individual in any manner relating to employment based on the individual's prior juvenile proceedings if the records related to these proceedings have been expunged.[33]

1.3(a)(v) State Enforcement, Remedies & Penalties

Expunged Juvenile Records. An employer that violates the discrimination provisions regarding expunged juvenile records may be found guilty of a misdemeanor, which is publishable by a fine, imprisonment, or both. Additionally, a person who violates the law is liable to the person discriminated against for damages in the amount of $300 or the actual amount of damages, whichever is greater.[34]

1.3(b) Restrictions on Credit Checks

1.3(b)(i) Federal Guidelines on Employer's Use of Credit Information & History

The Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA). The FCRA[35] governs an employer's acquisition and use of virtually any type of information gathered by a "consumer reporting agency"[36] regarding job applicants for use in hiring decisions or regarding employees for use in decisions concerning retention, promotion, or termination. Preemployment reports created by a consumer reporting agency (such as credit reports, [36] A consumer reporting agency is any person or entity that regularly collects credit or other information about consumers to provide "consumer reports" for third persons. 15 U.S.C. § 1681a(f). A consumer report is any communication by a consumer reporting agency bearing on an individual's "creditworthiness, credit standing, character, general reputation, personal characteristics or mode of living" that is used for employment purposes. 15 U.S.C. § 1681a(d).

criminal record reports, and department of motor vehicle reports) are subject to the FCRA, along with any other consumer report used for employment purposes.

The FCRA establishes procedures that an employer must strictly follow when using a consumer report for employment purposes. For example, before requesting a consumer report from a consumer reporting agency, the employer must notify the applicant or employee in writing that a consumer report will be requested and obtain the applicant's or employee's written authorization before obtaining the report. An employer that intends to take an adverse employment action, such as refusing to hire the applicant, based wholly or partly on information contained in a consumer report must also follow certain notification requirements. For additional information on the FCRA, see LITTLER ON BACKGROUND SCREENING & PRIVACY RIGHTS IN HIRING.

Many states have enacted their own version of the FCRA, referred to as "mini-FCRAs." While these laws often mirror the FCRA's requirements, there may be important distinctions between federal and state requirements.

Discrimination Concerns. While federal law does not prevent employers from asking about financial information provided they follow the FCRA, as noted above, federal antidiscrimination law prohibits employers from applying a financial requirement differently based on an individual's protected status—e.g., race, national origin, religion, sex, disability, age, or genetic information. The EEOC also cautions that an employer must not have a financial requirement "if it does not help the employer to accurately identify responsible and reliable employees, and if, at the same time, the requirement significantly disadvantages people of a particular [protected category]."[37]

1.3(b)(ii) State Guidelines on Employer's Use of Credit Information & History

West Virginia does not have a mini-FCRA law, and there are no additional state provisions specifically restricting a private employer's use of credit information and history.

1.3(c) Restrictions on Access to Applicants' Social Media Accounts

1.3(c)(i) Federal Guidelines on Access to Applicants' Social Media Accounts

There is no federal law governing an employer's ability to request access to applicants' or employees' social media accounts. However, various federal laws, or federal agencies' interpretations and enforcement of these laws, may impact employer actions. For example:

- Preemployment action taken against an applicant, or post-employment action taken against an employee, based on information discovered via social media may run afoul of federal civil rights law (e.g., Title VII, the Americans with Disabilities Act, and the Age Discrimination in Employment Act).
- The National Labor Relations Board, which is charged with enforcing federal labor laws, has taken an active interest in employers' social media policies and practices, and has concluded in many instances that, regardless of whether the workplace is unionized, the existence of such a policy or an adverse employment action taken against an employee based on the employee's violation of the policy can violate the National Labor Relations Act.

- Accessing an individual's social media account without permission may potentially violate the federal Computer Fraud and Abuse Act or the Stored Communications Act.

For additional information on federal law related to background screening, see LITTLER ON BACKGROUND SCREENING & PRIVACY RIGHTS IN HIRING.

1.3(c)(ii) State Guidelines on Access to Applicants' Social Media Accounts

In West Virginia, an employer cannot request, require, or coerce an employee or applicant to:

- disclose a username and password, or any other authentication information that allows access to the individual's personal account; or
- access the individual's personal account in the employer's presence.[38]

Additionally, an employer cannot compel an employee or applicant to add the employer or an employment agency to their contacts list that enable contacts to access a personal account.[39]

A personal account is an account, service, or profile on a social networking website that is used by an employee or potential employee exclusively for personal communications unrelated to any business purposes of the employer.[40]

Exceptions. The law does not prevent an employer from accessing information about an employee or applicant that is publicly available.[41] It also does not prevent an employer from complying with applicable laws, rules, or regulations.[42]

With respect to workplace investigations, an employer can conduct an investigation or require an employee to cooperate in an investigation. The law does not diminish an employer's authority and obligation to investigate complaints, allegations, or the occurrence of sexual, racial, or other harassment.[43] An employer can: (1) prohibit an employee or applicant from using a personal account during employment hours, while on employer time or for business purposes; or (2) request that an employee share specific personal account content to ensure compliance with applicable laws, regulatory requirements, or prohibitions against work-related employee misconduct.[44]

In addition, an employer may require an employee to share content that has been reported to make a factual determination, if the employer has specific information about an unauthorized transfer of its proprietary information, confidential information or financial data, to an employee's personal account.[45]

Rules for Employer-Provided Devices & Online Accounts. An employer can require an employee to disclose a username or password or similar authentication information for the purpose of accessing:

- an employer-issued electronic device; or
- an employer-provided account or service, obtained by virtue of the individual's employment, or used for the employer's business purposes.[46]

If an employer inadvertently receives the username, password, or any other authentication information that would enable it to gain access to the individual's personal account through use of an otherwise lawful technology that monitors the employer's network or employer-provided electronic devices for network security or data confidentiality purposes, the employer is not liable for having that information, unless it:

- uses that information, or enables a third party to use that information, to access the individual's personal account; or
- after becoming aware that the information was received, does not delete the information as soon as is reasonably practicable, unless that information is being retained by the employer in connection with an ongoing investigation of an actual or suspected breach of computer, network, or data security. Where an employer knows or, through reasonable efforts, should be aware that its network monitoring technology is likely inadvertently to receive such information, the employer must make reasonable efforts to secure that information.[47]

1.3(d) Polygraph / Lie Detector Testing Restrictions

1.3(d)(i) Federal Guidelines on Polygraph Examinations

The federal Employee Polygraph Protection Act (EPPA) imposes severe restrictions on using lie detector tests.[48] The law bars most private-sector employers from requiring, requesting, or suggesting that an employee or job applicant submit to a polygraph test, and from using or accepting the results of such a test.

The EPPA further prohibits employers from disciplining, discharging, or discriminating against any employee or applicant:

- for refusing to take a lie detector test;
- based on the results of such a test; and
- for taking any actions to preserve employee rights under the law.

There are some limited exceptions to the general ban. The exception applicable to most private employers allows a covered employer to test current employees reasonably suspected of involvement in a workplace incident that resulted in economic loss or injury to the employer's business. There is also a narrow exemption for prospective employees of security guard firms and companies that manufacture, distribute, or dispense controlled substances.

Notably, the EPPA prohibits only mechanical or electrical devices, not paper-and-pencil tests, chemical tests, or other nonmechanical or nonelectrical means that purport to measure an individual's honesty.

For more information on federal restrictions on polygraph tests, including specific procedural and notice requirements and disclosure prohibitions, see LITTLER ON EMPLOYMENT TESTING.

Most states have laws that mirror the federal law. Some of these state laws place greater restrictions on testing by prohibiting lie detector "or similar" tests, such as pencil-and-paper honesty tests.

1.3(d)(ii) State Guidelines on Polygraph Examinations

Employers cannot require or request, either directly or indirectly, that an employee or applicant submit to a psychophysiological detection of deception examination, lie detector, or other similar examination utilizing mechanical or electronic measures of physiological reactions to evaluate truthfulness.[49] Moreover, employers cannot knowingly allow the results of any examination administered outside West Virginia to be used to determine whether to employ an applicant or to continue an employee's employment in West Virginia.[50]

Psychophysiological detection of deception instrument means an instrument used for the detection of deception, which records permanently and simultaneously a person's cardiovascular and respiratory patterns and galvanic skin response, provided that the instrument may record other physiological changes pertinent to the detection of deception. Psychophysiological detection of deception means an examination which records permanently and simultaneously a person's cardiovascular and respiratory patterns and galvanic skin response.[51]

Exemption. The polygraph provisions do not apply to employees or applicants who would have direct access to the manufacture, storage, distribution, or sale of any controlled substance listed in title 21, section 812 of the U.S. Code.[52] However, the results of any examination must be used solely to determine whether to employ or to continue to employ any person exempted from the law and for no other purpose.[53]

1.3(d)(iii) State Enforcement, Remedies & Penalties

A violation of the polygraph law constitutes a misdemeanor, punished by a fine.[54] An aggrieved individual can file a private lawsuit. If successful, the individual will recover three times the damages suffered, reasonable attorneys' fees, filing fees, and reasonable costs (including, but not limited to, expenses of discovery and document reproduction). Moreover, damages may include, but are not limited to, back pay for the period during which the employee did not work or was denied a job.[55]

Additionally, with the written consent of an individual who is or would be aggrieved by an actual or threatened violation of the law, any appropriate employee organization can file a civil action on behalf of the individual or may intervene in any civil action.[56]

1.3(e) Drug & Alcohol Testing of Applicants

1.3(e)(i) Federal Guidelines on Drug & Alcohol Testing of Applicants

Whether an employer must implement a drug testing program for its employees under federal law is often determined by the industry in which it operates. For example, the Omnibus Transportation Employee Testing Act requires testing certain applicants and employees in the transportation industries.[57] The Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1988 also requires some federal contractors and all federal grantees (but not subcontractors or subgrantees) to certify to the appropriate federal agency that they are providing a drug-free workplace.[58] Employers not legally mandated to implement workplace substance abuse and drug and alcohol testing policies may still do so to promote workplace safety, deter illegal drug use, and diminish absenteeism and turnover. For more information on drug testing requirements under federal law, see LITTLER ON EMPLOYMENT TESTING.

For the most part, workplace drug and alcohol testing is governed by state law, and state laws differ dramatically in this area and continue to evolve.

1.3(e)(ii) State Guidelines on Drug & Alcohol Testing of Applicants

The West Virginia Safer Workplace Act ("Safer Workplace Act") authorizes private employers to test prospective employees and employees for the presence of drugs and alcohol in accordance with the statutory provisions, either as a condition of hiring or continued employment.[59] To qualify for protection against legal claims based on testing, employers must adhere to the accuracy and fairness safeguards outlined in the Safer Workplace Act.[60]

The new law neither mandates nor prohibits drug testing for private employers. The law states that it should not be "construed to encourage, discourage, restrict, limit, prohibit or require on-site drug or alcohol testing."[61] As well, "[n]o cause of action arises in favor of any person against an employer based upon the failure of the employer to establish a program or policy on substance abuse prevention, or to implement drug or alcohol testing."[62]

Written Policy Requirements. If an employer chooses to institute a testing program, it must adopt and disclose written policies to applicants and employees. Testing or retesting for the presence of drugs or alcohol by an employer must be carried out within the terms of the written policy which has been distributed to every employee subject to testing, and is available for review by prospective employees.[63]

[57] These industries are covered by the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA); the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration (FMSCA); the Federal Railroad Administration (FRA); the Federal Transit Administration (FTA); and the Pipeline and Hazardous Materials Safety Administration (PHMSA). In addition, the U.S. Department of Defense, the Coast Guard, and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, as well as other government agencies, have adopted regulations requiring mariners, employers, and contractors to maintain a drug-free workplace.

Testing Requirements. Within the terms of a written policy, an employer is authorized to drug test for, "among other legitimate drug abuse prevention and/or treatment purposes," the following reasons:

- deterrence and/or detection of possible illicit drug use, possession, sale, conveyance, or distribution, or manufacture of illegal drugs, intoxicants, or controlled substances in any amount or in any manner, on or off the job, or the abuse of alcohol or prescription drugs;
- investigation of possible individual employee impairment;
- investigation of accidents in the workplace or incidents of workplace theft or other employee misconduct;
- maintenance of safety for employees, customers, clients or the public at large; or
- maintenance of productivity, quality of products or services, or security of property or information.[64]

An employer must conduct testing and collect samples in accordance with the statutory requirements of the Safer Workplace Act.[65] Employers must test employees during or immediately before or after the regular work period. Testing is "worked time" for the purposes of compensation and benefits. An employer must also pay all actual costs for drug or alcohol testing required by the employer of employees and prospective employees, including reasonable transportation costs if the required testing is conducted at a location other than the employee's normal worksite and transportation is not otherwise provided.[66]

Drug and alcohol testing must include confirmation of any positive test results. For drug testing, confirmation will be by use of a different chemical process than was used by the employer in the initial drug screen.

Adverse Employment Actions. Upon receipt of a confirmed positive drug or alcohol test result which indicates a violation of the employer's written policy, or upon the refusal of an employee or prospective employee to provide a testing sample, an employer may use that test result or test refusal as a valid basis for disciplinary action, which includes, with respect to prospective employees, refusal to hire.[67]

With respect to current employees, an employer may use a confirmed test result or test refusal as a valid basis for disciplinary and rehabilitative action, which includes: (1) a requirement that the employee enroll in an employer-provided or approved rehabilitation, treatment, or counseling program, which may include additional testing, participation in which may be a condition of continued employment, and the costs of which may or may not be covered by the employer's health plan or policies; (2) suspension with or without pay; (3) termination of employment; and (4) other adverse employment action that conforms with the employer's written policy and procedures, including any collective bargaining agreements.[68]

Employers must provide employees, when requested or appropriate, with information as to the existence and availability of counseling, employee assistance, rehabilitation, and other drug abuse treatment programs the employer offers. However, the Safer Workplace Act does not require that an employer offer any of these services.[69]

If an employer implements a drug-free workplace pursuant to the statutory requirements of the Safer Workplace Act, and an employee tests positive for drugs or alcohol at a level proscribed by the employer's policy, the employee may be terminated. If terminated, the employee will forfeit their eligibility for unemployment compensation benefits, and if injured at the time of the intoxication, to indemnity benefits under the workers' compensation law.[70] The Act emphasizes, however:

> [T]he employer's drug-free workplace program must notify all employees that it is a condition of employment for an employee to refrain from reporting to work or working with the presence of drugs or alcohol in his or her body and that policy must also state that if an injured employee refuses to submit to a test for drugs or alcohol, that employee forfeits eligibility for unemployment compensation benefits, and if injured, for indemnity benefits under the Worker Compensation Laws. Employers who do not notify their employees of this condition of employment waive their right to assert that eligibility for benefits is entirely forfeited.[71]

Confidentiality. All communications received by an employer relevant to employee or prospective employee drug or alcohol test results and received through the employer's drug testing program are confidential communications and may only be used in a proceeding related to an action taken by an employer under the Safer Workplace Act.[72]

It remains to be seen how this statute will operate in light of existing case law concerning an individual's right of privacy, which the law expressly does not abrogate.[73]

Benefits & Leave Documents: Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA)	In addition to posting requirements, if an FMLA-covered employer has any eligible employees, it must provide a general notice to each employee by including the notice in employee handbooks or other written guidance to employees concerning employee benefits or leave rights, if such written materials exist, or by distributing a copy of the general notice to each new employee upon hiring.[80] In either case, distribution may be accomplished electronically. Employers may use a format other than the FMLA poster as a model notice, if the information provided includes, at a minimum, all of the information contained in that poster.[81] Where an employer's workforce is comprised of a significant portion of workers who are not literate in English, the employer must provide the general notice in a language in which the employees are literate. Employers furnishing FMLA notices to sensory-impaired individuals must also comply with all applicable requirements under federal or state law.[82]
Immigration Documents: Form I-9	Employers must ensure that individuals properly complete Form I-9 section 1 ("Employee Information and Verification") at the time of hire and sign the attestation with a handwritten or electronic signature. Also, individuals must present employers documentation establishing their identity and employment authorization. Within three business days of the first day of employment, employers must physically examine the documentation presented in the employee's presence, ensure that it appears to be genuine and relates to the individual, and complete Form I-9, section 2 ("Employer Review and Verification"). Employers must also, within three business days of hiring, sign the attestation with a handwritten or electronic signature. Employers that hire individuals for a period of less than three business days must comply with these requirements at the time of hire.[83] For additional information on these requirements, see LITTLER ON I-9 COMPLIANCE & WORK AUTHORIZATION VISAS.

2.2 New Hire Reporting Requirements

2.2(a) Federal Guidelines on New Hire Reporting

The federal New Hire Reporting Program requires all states to establish new hire reporting laws that comply with federal requirements.[90] State new hire reporting laws must include these minimum requirements:

1. employers must report to the appropriate state agency the employee's name, address, and Social Security number, as well as the employer's name, address, and federal tax identification number provided by the Internal Revenue Service;
2. employers may file the report by first-class mail, electronically, or magnetically;
3. if the report is transmitted by first-class mail, the report must be made not later than 20 days after the date of hire;
4. if the report is transmitted electronically or magnetically, the employer may report no later than 20 days following the date of hire or through two monthly transmissions not less than 12 days nor more than 16 days apart;
5. the format of the report must be a Form W-4 or, at the option of the employer, an equivalent form; and
6. the maximum penalty a state may set for failure to comply with the state new hire law is $25 (which increases to $500 if the failure to comply is the result of a conspiracy between the employer and the employee to not supply the required report or to supply a false or incomplete report).[91]

These are only the minimum requirements that state new hire reporting laws must satisfy. States may enact new hire reporting laws that, for example, require additional information to be submitted or require a shorter reporting timeframe. Many states have also developed their own reporting form; however, its use is optional.

Multistate Employers. The New Hire Reporting Program includes a simplified reporting method for multistate employers. The statute defines multistate employers as employers with employees in two or more states and that file new hire reports either electronically or magnetically. The federal statute permits multistate employers to designate one state to which they will transmit all of their reports twice per month, rather than filing new hire reports in each state. An employer that designates one state must notify the Secretary of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) in writing. When notifying the HHS, the multistate employer must include the following information:

- Federal Employer Identification Number (FEIN);
- employer's name, address, and telephone number related to the FEIN;
- state selected for reporting purposes;
- other states in which the company has employees;
- the corporate contact information (name, title, phone, email, and fax number); and
- the signature of person providing the information.

If the company is reporting new hires on behalf of subsidiaries operating under different names and FEINs, it must list the names and FEINs, and the states where those subsidiaries have employees working.

Multistate employers can notify the HHS by mail, fax, or online as follows:

2.2(b) State Guidelines on New Hire Reporting

The following is a summary of the key elements of West Virginia's new hire reporting law.

Who Must Be Reported. An employer must report newly-hired employees who reside or work in West Virginia, and to whom the employer anticipates paying earnings. This also includes an independent contractor if they will receive $2,500 or more for services. An employer must also report employees who are rehired or returned to work after being laid off, furloughed, separated, granted a leave without pay, or terminated from employment.[93]

Report Timeframe. The employer must submit the report within 14 days of hiring date. Employers that submit reports magnetically or electronically must do so twice monthly, not less than 12 nor more than 16 days apart.[94]

Information Required. The report must include the employee's name, address, Social Security number, and date of remuneration, along with the employer's name, address, any different address of the payroll office, and the federal employer identification number.[95]

Form & Submission of Report. Acceptable reporting forms include the federal Form W-4, New Hire Reporting Form, or a computer-generated list if it includes all required information. Reports may be submitted by mail, fax, magnetic media, file transfer protocol, new hire data entry software, electronic transfer via modem, encrypted email, or through the online website.[96]

2.3 Restrictive Covenants, Trade Secrets & Protection of Business Information

2.3(a) Federal Guidelines on Restrictive Covenants & Trade Secrets

Restrictive covenants are limitations placed on an employee's conduct that remain in force after the individual's employment has ended. Post-employment restrictions are designed to protect the employer and typically prevent an individual from disclosing the employer's confidential information or soliciting the employer's employees or customers. These restrictions may also prohibit individuals from engaging in competitive employment, including competitive self-employment, for a specific time period after the employment relationship ends. There is no federal law governing these types of restrictive covenants. Therefore, a restrictive covenant's ability to protect an employer's interests is dependent upon applicable state law and the type of relationship or covenant involved.

As a general rule, a covenant restraining competition (referred to as a "noncompete") is more likely to be viewed critically because restraints of trade are generally disfavored. The typical exception to this general rule is a reasonable restraint that has a legitimate business purpose, such as the protection of trade secrets, confidential information, customer relationships, business goodwill, training, or the sale of a business. Notwithstanding, state laws vary widely regarding which of these interests can be protected through a restrictive covenant. Even where states agree on the interest that can be protected, they may vary on what is seen as a reasonable and enforceable provision for such protection.

Protections against trade secret misappropriation are also available to employers. Until 2016, trade secrets were the only form of intellectual property (i.e., copyrights, patents, trademarks) not predominately governed by federal law. However, the Defend Trade Secrets Act of 2016 (DTSA) now provides a federal court civil remedy and original (but not exclusive) jurisdiction in federal court for claims of trade secret misappropriation.[98] As such, the DTSA provides trade secret owners a uniform federal law under which to pursue such claims. The DTSA operates alongside more limited existing protections under the federal Economic Espionage Act of 1996 and the Computer Fraud and Abuse Act, as well as through state laws adopting the Uniform Trade Secrets Act (UTSA).

For more information on these topics, see LITTLER ON PROTECTION OF BUSINESS INFORMATION & RESTRICTIVE COVENANTS.

2.3(b) State Guidelines on Restrictive Covenants & Trade Secrets

2.3(b)(i) State Restrictive Covenant Law

There is no general statute governing the enforceability of noncompete agreements in West Virginia. However, West Virginia courts will enforce noncompete agreements pursuant to limitations set forth in West Virginia case law.

To enforce a noncompete under West Virginia law, it must be supported by consideration, ancillary to a lawful contract, and both reasonable and consistent with the public interest. In evaluating reasonableness, agreements must be:

1. no greater than required for the protection of the employer;
2. do not impose undue hardship on the employee; and

[98] 18 U.S.C. §§ 1832 et seq.

© 2024 LITTLER MENDELSON, P.C. ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

3. not injurious to the public.[99]

West Virginia courts have recognized numerous protectable business interests, including:

- direct investments in skills acquired by the employee during their employment;
- confidential or unique information, such as trade secrets or customer lists;[100]
- goodwill of the employer;[101] and/or
- the employer's market share.[102]

Customer lists and other information must be "secret" in order to qualify as a protectable business interests. Paying an employee a high salary, standing alone, is not sufficient to qualify as a protectable business interest justifying the enforcement of a noncompete agreement.[103]

If the former employer can establish that it has a business interest requiring protection from a former employee that the agreement is designed to protect, the noncompete agreement becomes presumptively enforceable. The burden then shifts to the former employee to show that a narrower, less-restrictive covenant would protect the former employer's business interests equally well.[104]

A noncompete agreement will be found to be unreasonable on its face if its time or area limitations are excessively broad, or where the covenant appears designed to intimidate employees.[105] West Virginia courts have enforced restrictive covenants that seek to restrict former employees from contacting the employer's current and prospective customers and clients.[106]

Enforceability Following Employee Discharge. There is no case law or statutory provision to provide guidance on whether a noncompete is enforceable following an employee's termination.

2.3(b)(ii) Consideration for a Noncompete

Restrictive covenants require an employee to promise not to do something the employee would otherwise have been able to do. For example, by signing a noncompete agreement, an employee is giving up the right to open a competing business or work for an employer in a competing business. Therefore, employers need to provide an employee with "consideration" in return for the agreement to be binding. Providing consideration means giving something of value—i.e., a promise to do something that the employer was not otherwise obligated to do—such as extending an offer of employment to a new employee or providing a bonus for an existing employee.

Noncompetes entered into at the inception of the employment relationship are likely enforceable in West Virginia and will not fail for lack of consideration as long as the noncompete is not an isolated provision and is contained in a contract in which there are mutual promises.[107] A change in terms of employment may also constitute sufficient consideration.[108] Continued employment alone, however, is not sufficient to constitute adequate consideration.[109]

2.3(b)(iii) Ability to Modify or Blue Pencil a Noncompete

When a restrictive covenant is found to be unreasonable in scope, some states refuse to enforce its terms entirely (sometimes referred to as the "all-or-nothing" rule), while others may permit the court to "blue pencil" or modify an agreement that is unenforceable as written. Blue penciling refers to the practice whereby a court strikes portions of a restrictive covenant it deems unenforceable. Reformation, on the other hand, refers to a court modifying a restrictive covenant to make it enforceable, which may include introducing new terms into the agreement (sometimes referred to as the "reasonableness" rule). By rewriting an overly broad restrictive covenant rather than simply deeming it unenforceable, courts attempt to effectuate the parties' intentions as demonstrated by their agreement to enter into a restrictive covenant in the first place.

West Virginia courts may allow partial enforcement and narrow or "blue pencil" a covenant so that it conforms to the parties' actual requirements. Courts may decline to modify if the agreement is so overbroad on its face that it is unreasonable—i.e., "No court should trouble itself to rewrite an inherently unreasonable covenant to bring the covenant within the rule of reason."[110]

2.3(b)(iv) State Trade Secret Law

Like many states, West Virginia has adopted the Uniform Trade Secrets Act.[111] West Virginia's statute defines trade secrets as

> [I]nformation, including, but not limited to, a formula, pattern, compilation program, device, method, technique, or process that: (1) derives independent economic value, actual or potential, from not being generally known to, and not being generally ascertainable by proper means by, others who can obtain economic value from its disclosure and use; and (2) is the subject of efforts that are reasonable under the circumstances to maintain its secrecy.[112]

In addition, West Virginia courts look to numerous factors to determine whether a trade secret exists. Those factors include:

1. the extent to which the information is known outside of the employer's business;
2. the extent to which it is known by the employee and others involved in the employer's business;
3. the extent of the measures taken by the defendant to guard the secrecy of the information;
4. the value of the information to the employer and competitors;
5. the amount of effort or money expended by the employer in developing the information; and
6. the ease or difficulty with which the information could be properly acquired or duplicated by others.[113]

In determining whether there has been a violation, West Virginia courts will first determine whether a protectable trade secret exists, and then will determine if there was misappropriation.[114] The West Virginia statute defines misappropriation as:

1. acquisition of a trade secret of another by a person who knows or has reason to know that the trade secret was acquired by improper means; or
2. disclosure or use of another person's trade secrets without the other's express or implied consent by a person who:
    a. used improper means to acquire knowledge of the trade secret; or
    b. at the time of the disclosure or use, knew or had reason to know that his knowledge of the trade secret was: (1) derived from or through a person who had utilized improper means to acquire it; or (2) acquired under circumstances giving rise to a duty to maintain its secrecy or limit its use; or (3) derived from or through a person who owed a duty to the person seeking relief to maintain its secrecy or limit its use; or
    c. before a material change of his position, knew or had reason to know that the information was a trade secret and that knowledge of it had been acquired by accident or mistake.[115]

3. DURING EMPLOYMENT

3.1 Posting, Notice & Record-Keeping Requirements

3.1(a) Posting & Notification Requirements

3.1(a)(i) Federal Guidelines on Posting & Notification Requirements

Several federal employment laws require that specific information be posted in the workplace. Posting requirements vary depending upon the law at issue. For example, employers with fewer than 50 employees are not covered by the Family and Medical Leave Act and, therefore, would not be subject to the law's posting requirements. Table 5 details the federal workplace posting and notice requirements.

Table 5. Federal Posting & Notice Requirements

Employee Polygraph Protection Act (EPPA)	Employers must post and keep posted on their premises a notice explaining the EPPA.[116]
Equal Employment Opportunity (EEO) Act ("EEO is the Law" Poster)	Employers must post and keep posted in conspicuous places upon their premises, in an accessible format, a notice that describes the federal laws prohibiting discrimination in employment.[117]
Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA)	Employers must post and keep posted a notice, summarizing employee rights under the FLSA, in conspicuous places in every establishment where employees subject to the FLSA are employed.[118]
Family & Medical Leave Act (FMLA)	Employers must conspicuously post, where employees are employed, a notice explaining the FMLA's provisions and providing information on filing complaints of violations.[119]
Migrant and Seasonal Agricultural Worker Protection Act (MSPA)	Farm labor contractors, agricultural employers, and agricultural associations that employ or house any migrant or seasonal agricultural worker must conspicuously post at the place of employment a poster setting forth the MSPA's rights and protections, including the right to request a written statement of the information described in 29 U.S.C. § 1821(a). Employers may provide notice by posting or by other means, such as by distributing or mailing the notice.[123]
In addition to the federal posters required for all employers, government contractors may be required to post the following posters.
"EEO is the Law" Poster with the EEO is the Law Supplement	Employers subject to Executive Order No. 11246 must prominently post notice, where it can be readily seen by employees and applicants, explaining that discrimination in employment is prohibited on numerous grounds.[124] The second page includes reference to government contractors.
Annual EEO, Affirmative Action Statement	Government contractors covered by the Affirmative Action Program (AAP) requirements are required to post a separate EEO/AA Policy Statement (in addition to the required "EEO is the Law" Poster), which indicates the support of the employer's top U.S. official. Under federal law, it is illegal to possess or use marijuana.[191]

3.2(c)(ii) State Guidelines on Marijuana

West Virginia permits the use of cannabis for medical purposes. The law does not require an employer to commit any act that would put it or any person acting on its behalf in violation of federal law.[192]

Employers cannot discharge, threaten, refuse to hire, or otherwise discriminate or retaliate against an employee regarding an employee's compensation, terms, conditions, location or privileges solely on the basis of the employee's status as an individual who is certified to use medical cannabis.[193] Employers are not required to make any accommodation of the use of medical cannabis on the property or premises of any place of employment. Employers can discipline an employee for being under the influence of medical cannabis in the workplace or for working while under the influence of medical cannabis when the employee's conduct falls below the standard of care normally accepted for that position.[194]

Employers can also prohibit employees from performing any task an employer deems life-threatening—to either the employee or other employees—while under the influence of medical cannabis. Also, employers can prohibit employees from performing any duty that could result in a public health or safety risk while under the influence of medical cannabis. The prohibitions are not deemed an adverse employment decision, even if they result in financial harm to the employee.[195]

An individual using medical marijuana (i.e., the patient) is further prohibited from operating or being in physical control of any of the following while under the influence with a blood content of more than three nanograms of active tetrahydrocannabis per milliliter of blood in serum:

- chemicals that require a permit issued by the federal or a state government or agency;
- high-voltage electricity or any other public utility; or
- a vehicle, aircraft, train, boat, or heavy machinery.

In addition, a patient cannot perform any employment duties at heights or in confined spaces, including, but not limited to, mining while under the influence of medical cannabis.[196]

3.2(d) Data Security Breach

3.2(d)(i) Federal Data Security Breach Guidelines

Federal law does not contain a data security breach notification statute. However, of interest to employers that provide identity theft protection services to individuals affected by a data security breach, whether voluntarily or as required by state law:

- An employer providing identity protection services to an employee whose personal information may have been compromised due to a data security breach is not required to include the value of the identity protection services in the employee's gross income and wages.
- An individual whose personal information may have been compromised in a data breach is not required to include in their gross income the value of the identity protection services.
- The value of the provided identity theft protection services is not required to be reported on an information return (such as Form W-2 or Form 1099-MISC) filed with respect to affected employees.[197]

The tax relief provisions above do not apply to:

- cash provided in lieu of identity protection services;
- identity protection services provided for reasons other than as a result of a data breach, such as identity protection services received in connection with an employee's compensation benefit package; or

- proceeds received under an identity theft insurance policy.[198]

3.2(d)(ii) State Data Security Breach Guidelines

In West Virginia, when a covered entity discovers or is notified of a security breach including personal information, notice must be made. A security breach is an unauthorized acquisition of unencrypted and unredacted computerized data that compromises the security, confidentiality, or integrity of personal information maintained by any covered entity, when the entity reasonably believes the breach has caused or will cause identity theft or other fraud to any resident of West Virginia. A breach includes the acquisition of encrypted data when the breach involves access to the encryption key.[199]

Covered Entities & Information. Any person or business that conducts business in Virginia that owns or licenses computerized data that includes personal information. Personal information includes an individual's first name or first initial and last name in combination with any one or more of the following:

- Social Security number;
- driver's license number or state identification number issued in lieu of a driver's license; or
- financial account number or credit or debit card number in combination with any required security code, access code, or password that would permit access to the account.[200]

Information which is lawfully available publicly from federal, state, or local government records is not considered personal information. Data that is encrypted or redacted (i.e., altered or truncated data so that only four digits of a Social Security Number, driver's license number, state identification card number, or account number are accessible) is similarly exempt.

A covered entity may be considered to be in compliance with the data security breach statute and thus exempt from the notification requirements if it:

- complies with the notification requirements or security breach procedures of its primary or functional federal regulator;
- maintains and complies with a notification procedure as part of an information security policy for the treatment of personal information, if the policy affords the same or greater protection to the affected individuals as the data security breach statute; or
- is a financial institution subject to and in compliance with the Federal Interagency Guidance on Response Programs for Unauthorized Access to Consumer Information and Customer Notice.

Content & Form of Notice. Notice must include the following:

- a description of the categories of information reasonably believed to have been accessed or acquired;

- a telephone number or website an individual may use to learn what types of information the entity maintained about the individual or about individuals in general and whether or not the entity maintained information about that individual; and
- a toll-free contact telephone number and addresses for the major credit reporting agencies and information on how to place a fraud alert or a security freeze.[201]

Notice may be in one of the following formats:

- written notice to the postal address in the records of the covered entity;
- electronic notice if the notice complies with the federal e-sign act;
- telephonic notice; or
- substitute notice if the covered entity demonstrates that:
  - the cost of providing notice would exceed $50,000;
  - the affected class of persons to be notified exceeds 100,000; or
  - the covered entity does not have sufficient contact information.[202]

Substitute notice must consist of any of the two of the following:

- email notice when the covered entity has an electronic mail address for the affected resident;
- conspicuous posting of the notice on the website of the covered entity if the covered entity maintains a website; and
- notification by statewide media.[203]

Notice required under this section will not be considered a debt communication as defined by the federal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act.

Timing of Notice. Notice must be given without unreasonable delay.[204] However, notification may be delayed if:

- A law enforcement agency determines that the notification will impede a criminal investigation.
- A covered entity needs time to determine the scope of the breach.
- A covered entity needs time to restore the reasonable integrity of the data system.[205]

Additional Provisions. If more than 1,000 persons at a single time will be notified, then the covered entity must also notify without unreasonable delay all nationwide consumer reporting agencies of the timing, distribution, and content of the notices. This provision does not require that the covered entity disclose

3.3 Minimum Wage & Overtime

3.3(a) Federal Guidelines on Minimum Wage & Overtime

The primary source of federal wage and hour regulation is the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA). The FLSA establishes minimum wage, overtime, and child labor standards for covered employers. The FLSA applies to businesses that have: (1) annual gross revenue exceeding $500,000; and (2) employees engaged in commerce or in the production of goods for commerce, or employees that handle, sell, or otherwise work on goods or material that have been moved in or produced for commerce. For more information on this topic, see LITTLER ON FEDERAL WAGE & HOUR OBLIGATIONS.

As a general rule, federal wage and hour laws do not preempt state laws.[207] Thus, an employer must determine whether the FLSA or state law imposes a more stringent minimum wage, overtime, or child labor obligation and, if so, apply the more stringent of the two standards. If an employee is exempt from either federal or state law, but not both, then the employee must be paid for work in accordance with whichever law applies.

3.3(a)(i) Federal Minimum Wage Obligations

The current federal minimum wage is $7.25 per hour for most nonexempt employees.[208]

Tipped employees are paid differently. If an employee earns sufficient tips, an employer may take a maximum tip credit of up to $5.12 per hour. Therefore, the minimum cash wage that a tipped employee must be paid is $2.13 per hour. Note that if an employee does not make $5.12 in tips per hour, an employer must make up the difference between the wage actually made and the federal minimum wage of $7.25 per hour. An employer bears the burden of proving that it is not taking a tip credit larger than the amount of tips actually received by the employee.[209]

An employer cannot keep tips received by employees for any purpose, including allowing managers or supervisors to keep a portion of employees' tips, regardless of whether the employer takes a tip credit.[210]

3.3(a)(ii) Federal Overtime Obligations

Nonexempt employees must be paid one-and-a-half times their regular rate of pay for all hours worked over 40 in a workweek.[211] For more information on exemptions to the federal minimum wage and/or overtime obligations, see LITTLER ON FEDERAL WAGE & HOUR OBLIGATIONS.

3.3(b) State Guidelines on Minimum Wage Obligations

3.3(b)(i) State Minimum Wage

The minimum wage in West Virginia is currently $8.75 per hour for most nonexempt employees of employers with six or more employees.[212]

3.3(b)(ii) Tipped Employees

Tipped employees are paid differently. If an employee earns tips, an employer may take a maximum tip credit of up to a 70% of the minimum wage ($6.13) per hour and must pay a specific minimum cash wage ($2.62) per hour. Note that if an employee does not make the tip credit amount in tips per hour, the employer must make up the difference between the wage actually received and the minimum wage. An employer bears the burden of proving that it is not taking a tip credit larger than the amount of tips actually received by the employee.[213]

3.3(b)(iii) Minimum Wage Exceptions & Rates Applicable to Specific Groups

West Virginia's minimum wage is not applicable to employers of five or fewer employees.[214]

With respect to employee coverage, the definition of employee for purposes of the minimum wage law does not include:

- any individual employed by the United States;
- any individual engaged in the activities of an educational, charitable, religious, fraternal, or nonprofit organization where the employer-employee relationship does not in fact exist, or where the services rendered to such organizations are on a voluntary basis;
- newsboys, shoeshine boys, golf caddies, pinboys, and pin chasers in bowling lanes;
- traveling salespersons and outside salespersons;
- services performed by an individual in the employ of their parent, son, daughter, or spouse;
- any individual employed in a bona fide professional, executive, or administrative capacity;
- any person whose employment is for the purpose of on-the-job training;
- any person having a physical or mental handicap so severe as to prevent their employment or employment training in any training or employment facility other than a nonprofit sheltered workshop;
- any individual employed in a boys or girls summer camp;
- any person 62 years of age or over who receives retirement or survivors benefits from the Social Security Administration;
- any individual employed in agriculture within the meaning of the federal FLSA;
- any individual employed as a firefighter by the state or a state agency;

- ushers in theaters;
- any individual employed on a part-time basis who is a student in any recognized school or college;
- any individual employed by a local or interurban motorbus carrier;
- any employee with respect to whom the U.S. Department of Transportation has statutory authority to establish qualifications and maximum hours of service;
- any person employed on a per diem basis by the Senate, the House of Delegates, or the Joint Committee on Government and Finance of the Legislature of West Virginia, other employees of the Senate or House of Delegates designated by the presiding officer, and additional employees of the Joint Committee on Government and Finance designated by such joint committee;
- any person employed as a seasonal employee of a commercial whitewater outfitter where the seasonal employee works less than seven months in any one calendar year, and, in such case, only for the limited purpose of exempting the seasonal employee from the maximum hours provisions of the law; or
- any person employed as a seasonal employee of an amusement park where the seasonal employee works less than seven months in any one calendar year and, in such case, only for the limited purpose of exempting the seasonal employee from the maximum hours provisions of the law.[215]

West Virginia law also permits use of a training wage. An employer may pay a subminimum training wage of not less than $6.40 per hour to employees under age 20 for an employee's first 90 days of employment. However, if the employer's business has not been in operation for more than 90 days at the time the employer hired the employee, the employer may pay the employee the subminimum training wage for an additional period not to exceed 90 days.[216]

3.3(c) State Guidelines on Overtime Obligations

Employers with six or more employees must pay nonexempt employees one-and-one-half times their regular rate for all hours worked over 40 in a week.[217]

3.3(d) State Guidelines on Overtime Exemptions

As with the minimum wage obligations, the West Virginia overtime provisions do not apply to employers of five or fewer employees, or any employer if at least 80% of its employees are subject to the FLSA's overtime provisions. Employers covered by the FLSA should refer to the federal provisions.[218]

In addition to the categories of workers excluded from the definition of employee for purposes of the minimum wage provisions, the following types of workers are not considered employees for purposes of the state overtime provisions:

[215] W. VA. CODE § 21-5C-1.

[216] W. VA. CODE § 21-5C-2.

[217] W. VA. CODE §§ 21-5C-1, 21-5C-3.

- any salesperson, parts man or mechanic primarily engaged in selling or servicing automobiles, trailers, trucks, farm implements, or aircraft if employed by a nonmanufacturing establishment primarily engaged in the business of selling such vehicles to ultimate purchasers; or
- any person employed as a seasonal employee of a commercial whitewater outfitter, where the seasonal employee works less than seven months in any one calendar year.[219]

Like the FLSA, West Virginia law creates overtime exemptions for certain white collar employees and salespeople, as set forth below. However, state law contains no express exemption for commissioned sales employees.

Before turning to these overtime exemptions, it is important to reiterate that federal wage and hour laws do not preempt state laws[220] and that the law most beneficial to the employee will apply. Therefore, even if an employee meets one of the exemptions discussed below under state law, if the employee does not meet the requirements of the federal exemption (or vice versa), including the salary thresholds, then the employee will not qualify as exempt.

3.3(d)(i) Executive Exemption

Under West Virginia law, an employee is covered by the executive exemption if the employee meets the following requirements:

- the employee is paid on a salary basis at a rate of at least $684 per workweek (or a higher amount set by federal regulations);
- the employee's primary duty is management of the employer's organization, or of a customarily recognized department or subdivision;
- the employee customarily and regularly directs the work of two full-time employees or the equivalent of two or more full-time employees; and
- the employee has the authority to hire or fire other employees, or whose suggestions and recommendations as to the hiring, firing, advancement, promotion, or any other change of status of other employees are given particular weight.[221]

3.3(d)(ii) Administrative Exemption

An employee is covered by the administrative exemption under West Virginia law if the employee meets the following requirements:

- the employee is paid on a salary or fee basis at a rate of at least $684 per workweek (or a higher amount set by federal regulations);
- the employee's primary duty is the performance of office or nonmanual work directly related to management or general business operations of the employer or its customers; and

3.3(d)(iii) Professional Exemption

An individual employed in a bona fide professional capacity is excluded from the definition of employee.[223]

Learned Professional. An individual is exempt if the individual meets all the following requirements:

- the employee is paid on a salary or fee basis at a rate of at least $684 per workweek (or a higher amount set by federal regulations); and
- the employee's primary duty is performing work requiring advanced knowledge in a field of science or learning that is customarily acquired by a prolonged course of specialized intellectual instruction.

Salary or fee requirements do not apply to bona fide teachers or practitioners of law or medicine.[224]

Creative Professional. An individual is exempt is the individual meets all the following requirements:

- the employee is paid on a salary or fee basis at a rate of at least $684 per workweek (or a higher amount set by federal regulations); and
- the employee's primary duty is performing work requiring invention, imagination, originality, or talent in a recognized field of artistic or creative endeavor, such as music, writing, acting, and the graphic arts.[225]

Computer Professional. An individual is exempt is the individual meets all the following requirements:

- the employee is paid either on a salary or fee basis at a rate of at least $684 per workweek (or a higher amount set by federal regulations) or on an hourly basis at a rate of not less than $27.63 per hour (or a higher amount set by federal regulations);
- the individual is employed as a computer systems analyst, computer programmer, software engineer, or other similarly skilled worker in the computer field performing the following primary duties; and
- the employee's primary duty consists of the following or a combination of the following:
  - the application of systems analysis techniques and procedures, including consulting with users, to determine hardware, software or system functional specifications;
  - the design, development, documentation, analysis, creation, testing, or modification of computer systems or programs, including prototypes, based on and related to user or system design specifications; or

- the design, documentation, testing, creation or modification of computer programs related to machine operating systems.[226]

3.3(d)(iv) Outside Sales Exemption

"Traveling salesmen and outside salesmen" are excluded from the definition of employee.[227] An individual engaged in making outside sales is exempt if all the following requirements are met:

- the employee is customarily and regularly engaged away from their employer's place or places of business; and
- the employee's primary duty is making or obtaining orders or contracts for services or for the use of facilities for which consideration will be paid by a client or customer.[228]

The exemption does not include employees training to work in outside sales who are not independently working on their own.[229]

3.4 Meal & Rest Period Requirements

3.4(a) Federal Meal & Rest Period Guidelines

3.4(a)(i) Federal Meal & Rest Periods for Adults

Federal law contains no generally applicable meal period requirements for adults. Under the FLSA, bona fide meal periods (which do not include coffee breaks or time for snacks and which ordinarily last 30 minutes or more) are not considered "hours worked" and can be unpaid.[230] Employees must be completely relieved from duty for the purpose of eating regular meals. Employees are not relieved if they are required to perform any duties—active or inactive—while eating. It is not necessary that employees be permitted to leave the premises if they are otherwise completely freed from duties during meal periods.

Federal law contains no generally applicable rest period requirements for adults. Under the FLSA, rest periods of short duration, running from five to 20 minutes, must be counted as "hours worked" and must be paid.[231]

3.4(a)(ii) Federal Meal & Rest Periods for Minors

The FLSA does not include any generally applicable meal and rest period requirements for minors. The principles described above as to what constitutes "hours worked" for meal and rest periods applies to minors as well as to adults.

3.4(a)(iii) Lactation Accommodation Under Federal Law

The Providing Urgent Maternal Protections for Nursing Mothers Act ("PUMP Act"), which expands the FLSA's lactation accommodation provisions, applies to most employers.[232] Under the FLSA, an employer must provide a reasonable break time for an employee to express breast milk for the employee's nursing child for one year after the child's birth, each time the employee needs to express milk. The employer is not required to compensate an employee receiving reasonable break time for any time spent during the workday for the purpose of expressing milk unless otherwise required by federal, state, or local law. Under the PUMP Act, break time for expressing milk is considered hours worked if the employee is not completely relieved from duty during the entirety of the break.[233] An employer must also provide a place, other than a bathroom, that is shielded from view and free from intrusion from coworkers and the public, which may be used by an employee to express breast milk.[234] Exemptions apply for smaller employers and air carriers.[235]

The Pregnant Workers Fairness Act (PWFA), enacted in 2022, also impacts an employer's lactation accommodation obligations. The PWFA requires employers of 15 or more employees to make reasonable accommodations for a qualified employee's known limitations related to pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions.[236] Lactation is considered a related medical condition.[237] Reasonable accommodation related to lactation includes, but is not limited to breaks, space for lactation, and accommodations related to pumping and nursing during work hours.[238] For more information on these topics, see LITTLER ON LEAVES OF ABSENCE: FAMILY, MEDICAL & PREGNANCY LEAVES.

3.4(b) State Meal & Rest Period Guidelines

3.4(b)(i) State Meal & Rest Periods for Adults

Meal Periods. Employers allow at least 20 minutes for meal breaks, at times reasonably designated by the employer, for each employee who works six or more hours. This rule applies in all situations where employees are not afforded necessary breaks and/or permitted to eat lunch while working.[239] Break or meal time of 20 consecutive minutes or less is compensable time.[240] However, break or meal time that is typically 30 consecutive minutes or more may be treated as nonwork time and unpaid.[241]

The meal period statute only applies when employees are not afforded necessary breaks and/or permitted to eat lunch while working. Accordingly, if employees are provided these opportunities, the statute would not apply.[242]

Exempt Employees. The meal period requirements apply to exempt employees. The meal period statute does not define the term employee. Moreover, there is no general definitions statute. Accordingly, in the absence of an express definition, coupled with the fact the law applies to "each of [an employer's] employees," the law should be interpreted to apply to exempt employees.[243]

Rest Periods. Although there is no rest period requirement, breaks of short duration, up to 20 minutes, must be counted as hours worked.[244]

3.4(b)(ii) State Meal & Rest Periods for Minors

Minors under age 16 may not work more than five continuous hours without a meal period of at least 30 minutes.[245]

3.4(b)(iii) State Enforcement, Remedies & Penalties

There is no express meal period penalty. However, a catchall penalty provision provides that an employer that violates any provision of the labor laws for which no penalty has been specifically provided commits a misdemeanor. If convicted, violators will be fined between $10 and $50, imprisoned up to six months, or both.[246]

A violation of the meal period requirement for minor employees is a misdemeanor, which is punishable by a fine between $50 and $200 for the first offense and a fine between $200 and $1,000, imprisonment up to six months, or both for the second or subsequent offenses.[247]

3.4(b)(iv) Lactation Accommodation Under State Law

A mother may breast feed her child in any location open to the public.[248] Although the law does not specifically mention employers, it can be construed to include places of employment.

3.5 Working Hours & Compensable Activities

3.5(a) Federal Guidelines on Working Hours & Compensable Activities

In contrast to some state laws that provide for mandatory days of rest, the FLSA does not limit the hours or days an employee can work and requires only that an employee be compensated for "all hours" worked in a workweek. Ironically, the FLSA does not define what constitutes hours of work.[249] Therefore, courts and agency regulations have developed a body of law looking at whether an activity—such as on-call, training, or travel time—is or is not "work." In addition, the Portal-to-Portal Act of 1947 excluded certain preliminary and postliminary activities from "work time."[250]

© 2024 LITTLER MENDELSON, P.C. ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

As a general rule, employee work time is compensable if expended for the employer's benefit, if controlled by the employer, or if allowed by the employer. All time spent in an employee's principal duties and all time spent in essential ancillary activities must be counted as work time. An employee's principal duties include an employee's productive tasks. However, the phrase is expansive enough to encompass not only those tasks an employee is employed to perform, but also tasks that are an "integral and indispensable" part of the principal activities. For more information on this topic, including information on whether time spent traveling, changing clothes, undergoing security screenings, training, waiting or on-call time, and sleep time will constitute hours worked under the FLSA, see LITTLER ON FEDERAL WAGE & HOUR OBLIGATIONS.

3.5(b) State Guidelines on Working Hours & Compensable Activities

West Virginia law requires an employer to include all hours worked by an employee as compensable time, and accordingly permits an employer to exclude nonwork time from the calculation of hours worked.[251] State law expressly excludes from hours worked:

> any time spent changing clothes or washing at the beginning or end of each workday, time spent in walking, riding or traveling to and from the actual place of performance of the principal activity or activities which such employee is employed to perform and activities which are preliminary to or postliminary to said principal activity or activities, subject to such exceptions as the [state labor] commissioner may by rules and regulations define.[252]

For example, the regulations provide that time spent changing or washing clothes is compensable only when required by law or by the employer for safety, decontamination, or production reasons.[253]

There are a number of additional issues considered when determining whether particular activities constitute work. This publication looks more closely at pay requirements for reporting time, waiting or on-call time, and travel time. West Virginia law addresses the compensability of the last two—on-call time and travel time.

On-Call Time. Employees who are required to remain on call on the employer's premises, or so close by or at their home so that they cannot use the time effectively for their own purposes are considered to be working while on call. Employees who are not required to remain on the employer's premises but are merely required to leave word at their home or with their employer where they may be reached are not working while on call.[254]

If an employee has been engaged to wait, the employer must treat the time an employee spends engaged to wait as compensable time.[255] requires an activity (or whether the activity benefits the employer), but rather whether the activity "is tied to the productive work that the employee is employed to perform").

Travel Time. Time spent in walking, riding, or traveling to and from the location of the employee's work (i.e., commuting) is not compensable.[256]

If an employer requires an employee to travel for work and no overnight stay is required, the following time is compensable:

- the time the employee spends traveling away from and returning to the employee's assigned work location; and
- the time the employee spends traveling to perform their job assignments and responsibilities.[257]

If an employer requires an employee to travel when an overnight stay away from the employee's home is authorized, the following time is compensable:

- the time the employee spends traveling during the employee's normal work hours on any day of the week, including days when the employee is not normally scheduled to work, such as Saturday and Sunday; and
- the time the employee spends traveling either before or after the employee's normal work hours on any day of the week, including days when the employee is not normally scheduled to work, such as Saturday or Sunday, except for the time that the employee spends as a passenger on any mode of transportation. However, if the employee is performing work duties required by the employer when the employee is a passenger on any mode of transportation, the time is compensable.[258]

Travel to and from employer-required meetings is compensable regardless of whether overnight stay is required.[259]

3.6 Child Labor

3.6(a) Federal Guidelines on Child Labor

The FLSA limits the tasks minors, defined as persons under 18 years of age, can perform and the hours they can work. Occupational limits placed on minors vary depending on the age of the minor and whether the work is in an agricultural or nonagricultural occupation. There are exceptions to the list of prohibited activities for apprentices and student-learners, or if an individual is enrolled in and employed pursuant to approved school-supervised and school-administered work experience and career exploration programs.[260] Additional latitude is also granted where minors are employed by their parents.

Considerable penalties can be imposed for violation of the child labor requirements, and goods made in violation of the child labor provisions may be seized without compensation to the employer. Employers may protect themselves from unintentional violations of child labor provisions by maintaining an

West Virginia's child labor laws apply to minors under 18 years of age. The state has adopted the federal regulations governing child labor.[262]

3.6(b)(i) State Restrictions on Type of Employment for Minors

General Restrictions. West Virginia's Child Labor Act restricts the employment of minors under age 18 by age and by type of occupation, as set forth in Table 9.

Table 9. State Restrictions on Type of Employment by Age

Under Age 18	Minors under age 18 cannot work in, about, or in connection with any of the following occupations: • motor vehicle driver and outside helper whose work includes riding on a motor vehicle outside the cab for the purpose of assisting in transporting or delivery of goods; • manufacturing, storage, handling, or transportation of explosives or highly flammable substances; • ore reduction works, smelters, hot rolling mills, furnaces, foundries, forging shops, or in any place in which the heating, melting, or heat treatment of metals occurs; • logging and sawmilling; • operation of power-driven machinery or hoisting apparatus, subject to limited exceptions; • occupations involving exposure to radioactive substances or ionizing radiation; • mining; • occupations involving slaughtering, meat-packing, or processing or rendering; • wrecking, demolition, or ship-breaking; • brick, tile, and kindred product manufacturing; • roofing and excavation; • in a bar or selling, dispensing, or serving alcoholic beverages; or • any occupation prohibited by law or determined by the state labor department to be dangerous or injurious.[263]

Under Age 14	Minors under age 14 may not be employed except in the following occupations: • nonhazardous agricultural or horticultural activities; • domestic service within the employer's residence; • work for their parents or legal guardian in their solely owned business, subject to the prohibitions against certain occupations for minors under 18; • as actors or performers in motion pictures, theatrical, radio, or television productions; and • newspaper delivery.[265]

Restrictions on Selling or Serving Alcohol. In West Virginia, minors under age 18 cannot work in a bar and may not sell, dispense, or serve alcoholic beverages.[266]

3.6(b)(ii) State Limits on Hours of Work for Minors

In West Virginia, minors under age 16 cannot work:

- during school hours (unless part of an approved work experience or career exploration program);
- more than three hours a day when public schools are in session;
- more than eight hours a day when public schools are not in session;
- more than 18 hours a week when public schools are in session;
- more than 40 hours a week when public schools are not in session; or
- between 7:00 P.M. and 7:00 A.M., except that minors may work until 9:00 P.M. from June 1 through Labor Day.

Note that although the Child Labor Act places occupational restrictions on minors under age 18, the time and hour restrictions do not appear to apply to minors aged 16 and 17. Minors under age 14 cannot work, subject to limited exceptions.[267]

3.6(b)(iii) State Child Labor Exceptions

The hours of work provisions do not apply to minors working in agricultural and horticultural activities, domestic services, for certain parent-owned businesses, as actors or performers, or in newspaper delivery.[268]

3.6(b)(iv) State Work Permit or Waiver Requirements

An employer may require minors aged 16 and 17 to obtain from the county superintendent of schools an age certificate verifying their ages. The employer should retain on file the age certificates for minors in its employment.[269]

Minors aged 14 and 15 must have a work permit in order to be employed. Employers must obtain and keep on file a work permit issued by the superintendent of schools of the county in which the minor resides, or by another authorized person.[270] Special "supervision permits" may be granted to minors aged 14 and 15 to work longer hours or in occupations deemed hazardous.[271]

A minor under age 14 may only obtain a work permit to work in the school that the minor attends, and if the work will occur only during regular school hours.[272]

Blanket work permits are authorized when 25 or more minors are to be employed for a period of 90 days or less by an employer.[273]

3.6(b)(v) State Enforcement, Remedies & Penalties

The West Virginia Division of Labor enforces the Child Labor Act. The Division has the authority to enter and inspect any place where a minor may be employed and to access to the employer's work permits, age certificates, or other proof of age and time records.[274] A violation of the Child Labor Act is a misdemeanor, which is punishable by a fine between $50 and $200 for the first offense and a fine between $200 and $1,000, imprisonment up to six months, or both for the second or subsequent offenses.[275]

3.7 Wage Payment Issues

3.7(a) Federal Guidelines on Wage Payment

There is no federal wage payment law. The FLSA covers minimum wage and overtime requirements, but would not generally be considered a "wage payment" law as the term is used in state law to define when and how wages must be paid.

3.7(a)(i) Form of Payment Under Federal Law

Authorized Instruments. Wages may be paid by cash, check, or facilities (e.g., board or lodging).[276]

Direct Deposit. Neither the FLSA, nor its implementing regulations, address direct deposit of employee wages. The U.S. Department of Labor (DOL) has briefly considered the permissibility of direct deposit by stating:

> The payment of wages through direct deposit into an employee's bank account is an acceptable method of payment, provided employees have the option of receiving payment by cash or check directly from the employer. As an alternative, the employer may make arrangements for employees to cash a check drawn against the employer's payroll deposit account, if it is at a place convenient to their employment and without charge to them.[277]

According to the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB), an employer may require direct deposit of wages by electronic means if the employee is allowed to choose the institution that will receive the direct deposit. Alternatively, an employer may give employees the choice of having their wages deposited at a particular institution (designated by the employer) or receiving their wages by another means, such as by check or cash.[278]

Payroll Debit Card. Employers may pay employees using payroll card accounts, so long as employees have the choice of receiving their wages by at least one other means.[279] The "prepaid rule" regulation defines a payroll card account as an account that is directly or indirectly established through an employer and to which electronic fund transfers of the consumer's wages, salary, or other employee compensation such as commissions are made on a recurring basis, whether the account is operated or managed by the employer, a third-party payroll processor, a depository institution, or any other person.[280]

Employers that use payroll card accounts must comply with several requirements set forth in the prepaid rule. Employers must give employees certain disclosures before the employees choose to be paid via a payroll card account, including a short-form disclosure, a long-form disclosure, and other information that must be disclosed in close proximity to the short-form disclosure. Employees must receive the short-form disclosure and either receive or have access to the long-form disclosure before the account is activated. All disclosures must be provided in writing. Importantly, within the short-form disclosure, employers must inform employees in writing and before the card is activated that they need not receive wages by payroll card. This disclosure must be very specific. It must provide a clear fee disclosure and include the following statement or an equivalent: "You do not have to accept this payroll card. Ask your employer about other ways to receive your wages." Alternatively, a financial institution or employer may provide a statement that the consumer has several options to receive wages or salary, followed by a list of the options available to the consumer, and directing the consumer to tell the employer which option the customer chooses using the following language or similar: "You have several options to receive your wages: [list of options]; or this payroll card. Tell your employer which option you choose." This statement must be located above the information about fees. A short-form disclosure covering a payroll card account also must contain a statement regarding state-required information or other fee discounts or waivers.[281] As part of the disclosures, employees must: (1) receive a statement of pay card fees; (2) have ready access to a statement of all fees and related information; and (3) receive periodic statements of recent account activity or free and easy access to this information online. Under the prepaid rule, employees have limited responsibility for unauthorized charges or other unauthorized access, provided they have registered their payroll card accounts.[282]

The CFPB provides numerous online resources regarding prepaid cards, including Frequently Asked Questions. Employers that use or plan to use payroll card accounts should consult these resources, in addition to the prepaid card regulation, and seek knowledgeable counsel.[283]

3.7(a)(ii) Frequency of Payment Under Federal Law

Federal law does not specify the timing of wage payment and does not prohibit payment on a semi-monthly or monthly basis. However, all wages that are required by the FLSA are generally considered to be due on the payday for the pay period in which the wages were earned. FLSA regulations state that if an employer cannot calculate how much it owes an employee in overtime by payday, it must pay that employee overtime as soon as possible and no later than the next payday.[284]

3.7(a)(iii) Final Payment Under Federal Law

Federal law does not address when final wages must be paid to discharged employees or to employees who voluntarily quit. However, as noted in 3.7(a)(ii), wages that are required by the FLSA are generally considered to be due on the payday for the pay period in which the wages were earned.

3.7(a)(iv) Notification of Wage Payments & Wage Records Under Federal Law

Federal law does not generally require employers to provide employees wage statements when wages are paid. However, federal law does require employers to furnish pay stubs to certain unique classifications of employees, including migrant farm workers.

Federal law does not address whether electronic delivery of earnings statements is permissible.

3.7(a)(v) Changing Regular Paydays or Pay Rate Under Federal Law

There are no general notice requirements under federal law should an employer wish to change an employee's payday or wage rate. However, it is recommended that employees receive advance written notice before a change in regular paydays or pay rate occurs.

3.7(a)(vi) Paying for Expenses Under Federal Law

The FLSA does not have a general expense reimbursement obligation. Nonetheless, it prohibits employers from circumventing minimum wage and overtime laws by passing onto employees the cost of items that are primarily for the benefit or convenience of the employer, if doing so reduces an employee's wages below the highest applicable minimum wage rate or cuts into overtime premium pay.[285] Because the FLSA requires an employer to pay minimum wage and overtime premiums "free and clear," the employer must reimburse employees for expenses that are primarily for the benefit of the employer if those expenses would reduce the applicable required minimum wage or overtime compensation.[286] Accordingly, among other items, an employer may be required to reimburse an employee for expenses related to work uniforms,[287] tools and equipment,[288] and business transportation and travel.[289] Additionally, if an employee is reimbursed for expenses normally incurred by an employee that primarily benefit the employer, the reimbursement cannot be included in the employee's regular rate.[290]

3.7(a)(vii) Wage Deductions Under Federal Law

Permissible Deductions. Under the FLSA, an employer can deduct:

- state and federal taxes, levies, and assessments (e.g., income, Social Security, unemployment) from wages;[291]
- amounts ordered by a court to pay an employee's creditor, trustee, or other third party, under garnishment, wage attachment, trustee process, or bankruptcy proceedings (the employer or anyone acting on its behalf cannot profit from the transaction);[292]
- amounts as directed by an employee's voluntary assignment or order to pay an employee's creditor, donee, or other third party (the employer or agent cannot directly or indirectly profit or benefit from the transaction);[293]

- with an employee's authorization for:
  - the purchase of U.S. savings stamps or U.S. savings bonds;
  - union dues paid pursuant to a valid and lawful collective bargaining agreement;
  - payments to the employee's store accounts with merchants wholly independent of the employer;
  - insurance premiums, if paid to independent insurance companies where the employer is under no obligation to supply the insurance and derives, directly or indirectly, no benefit or profit from it; or
  - voluntary contributions to churches and charitable, fraternal, athletic, and social organizations, or societies from which the employer receives no profit or benefit, directly or indirectly;[294]
- the reasonable cost of providing employees board, lodging, or other facilities by including this cost as wages, if the employer customarily furnishes these facilities to employees;[295] or
- amounts for premiums the employer paid while maintaining benefits coverage for an employee during a leave of absence under the Family and Medical Leave Act if the employee fails to return from leave after leave is exhausted or expires, if the deductions do not otherwise violate applicable federal or state wage payment or other laws.[296]

Additionally, while the FLSA contains no express provisions concerning deductions relating to overpayments made to an employee, loans and advances, or negative vacation balance, informal guidance from the DOL suggests such deductions may nonetheless be permissible. While this informal guidance may be interpreted to permit a deduction for loans to employees, employers should consult with counsel before deducting from an employee's wages. An employer can deduct the principal of a loan or wage advance, even if the deduction cuts into the minimum wage or overtime owed. However, deductions for interest or administrative costs on the loan or advance are illegal to the extent that they cut into the minimum wage or overtime pay. Loans or advances must be verified.[297]

An employer may also be able to deduct for wage overpayments even if the deduction cuts into the employee's FLSA minimum wage or overtime pay. The deduction can be made in the next pay period or several pay periods later. An employer cannot, however, charge an administrative fee or charge interest that brings the payment below the minimum wage.[298] Finally, if an employee is granted vacation pay before it accrues, with the understanding it constitutes an advance of pay, and the employee quits or is fired before the vacation is accrued, an employer can recoup the advanced vacation pay, even if this cuts into the minimum wage or overtime owed an employee.[299]

Deductions During Non-Overtime v. Overtime Workweeks. Whether an employee receives overtime during a given workweek affects an employer's ability to take deductions from the employee's wages. During non-overtime workweeks, an employer may make qualifying deductions (i.e., the cost is reasonable and there is no employer profit) for "board, lodging, or other facilities" even if the deductions would reduce an employee's pay below the federal minimum wage. Deductions for articles that do not qualify as "board, lodging, or other facilities" (e.g., tools, equipment, cash register shortages) can be made in non-overtime workweeks if, after the deduction, the employee is paid at least the federal minimum wage.[300]

During overtime workweeks, deductions can be made on the same basis in overtime weeks as in non-overtime weeks if the amount deducted does not exceed the amount which could be deducted if the employee had not worked overtime during the workweek. Deductions that exceed this amount for articles that are not "facilities" are prohibited. There is no limit on the amount that can be deducted for qualifying deductions for "board, lodging, or other facilities." However, deductions made only in overtime weeks, or increases in prices charged for articles or services during overtime workweeks will be scrutinized to determine whether they are manipulations to evade FLSA overtime requirements.[301]

Prohibited Deductions. The FLSA prohibits an employer from making deductions for administrative or bookkeeping expenses incurred by an employer to the extent they cut into the minimum wage and overtime owed an employee.[302]

3.7(b) State Guidelines on Wage Payment

3.7(b)(i) Form of Payment Under State Law

Authorized Instruments. Wages may be paid by cash, check, money order, direct deposit, or payroll debit card. Paychecks must be drawn on banks convenient to the place of employment where suitable arrangements have been made for cashing the check for the full amount of wages.[303]

Direct Deposit. Mandatory direct deposit is not permitted in West Virginia. Wages paid by direct deposit do not require an agreement in writing by the employer and employee. Direct deposit may be used upon the employee's identification of their financial institution, the account type, and account number. If an employee does not provide the information necessary to enable direct deposit, then the employer may pay the employee by payroll card. An employer cannot require employees to use or accept direct deposit.[304]

Payroll Debit Card. An employer may pay employees by deposit or electronic transfer of immediately available funds into an employee's payroll card account in a federal insured depository institution. Wages paid by payroll card do not require an agreement in writing by the employer and employee. However, employers who choose to pay compensation using payroll cards must also give employees the option of being paid by direct deposit. If an employee does not provide the information necessary to enable direct deposit, then the employer may pay the employee by payroll card. If using payroll cards, the employer must provide full written disclosure of any applicable fees associated with the payroll card and ensure that employees can make at least one withdrawal or transfer from the payroll card per pay period without cost or fee for any amount contained on the card. Further, employers must ensure that the employee may make in-network withdrawals or transfers without cost or fees for any amount contained on the card.[305]

3.7(b)(ii) Frequency of Payment Under State Law

An employer must pay wages due at least twice every month with no more than 19 days separating paydays, unless the state labor department approves an employer's petition to establish different regular paydays.[306] Wages due must include all wages earned up to and including the twelfth day immediately preceding the regular payday.[307] If a regular payday is on specific dates of the month and the employer is closed for business on that date, wages must be paid on the day immediately preceding the regular payday that the employer is open for business.[308] The pay frequency requirement applies to all employees, including professional employees.[309] There are special rules for railroad employees.[310]

3.7(b)(iii) Final Payment Under State Law

Discharge or Resignation. If an employee is fired, quits, or resigns, the employee's wages due must be paid on or before the next regular payday on which wages would otherwise be due and payable. If the employee requests payment by mail, payment is considered made on the date the mailed payment is postmarked.[311]

If fringe benefits (e.g., vacation, production incentive bonuses, etc.) are provided and due under an agreement between an employee and employer but, per the agreement's terms, are to be paid at a future date or upon additional conditions which are ascertainable, they must be paid per the agreement's terms and are not subject to the final wages statute's timing requirements.[312]

Labor Dispute or Layoff. If work is suspended due to a labor dispute, or an employee for any reason whatsoever is laid off, the employee must be paid in full by the next regular payday. If the employee requests payment by mail, payment is considered made on the date the mailed payment is postmarked.[313]

Notice of Employer's Authorized Representative. West Virginia's wage payment statute establishes the state's requirements for accurate, timely payment of wages. The law creates a safe harbor for employers to correct underpayment or nonpayment of wages and benefits due to separated employees. The law requires an employee to make a written demand seeking payment of any alleged underpayment or nonpayment prior to seeking liquidated damages or attorney's fees in a civil action. It requires an employer to provide written notice to the employee of the identity of the employer's authorized representative plus the contact information for that person, via email and regular mail, at the time of separation. If the employer fails to provide the required written notice, the employee is not required to provide a demand letter. "Written demand" means any writing, including email, from or on behalf of an employee stating that the employer has not paid all of the wages or fringe benefits which the employee is owed.

Upon receiving a written demand, the employer has seven calendar days from receipt to correct the alleged underpayment or nonpayment of the wages and fringe benefits due. If, after seven days, the employer has not corrected the alleged underpayment or nonpayment, or paid all undisputed amounts due to the employee, the employee may seek liquidated damages and attorney's fees in a civil action for underpayment or nonpayment of wages.[314]

3.7(b)(iv) Notification of Wage Payments & Wage Records Under State Law

Employers must provide each employee with an itemized statement of deductions from wages for each pay period in which deductions are made. The itemized statement must include:

- rate of pay;
- overtime rate of pay if any;
- the units of time or rate used to calculate wages; and
- statement of deductions made from gross pay.[315]

Generally, the law requires the employer to furnish each employee a wage statement each pay period, but does not specify what form it must take. When wages are paid by direct deposit, a wage statement may be furnished electronically if the employee has direct, immediate, and convenient access to their wage statement.[316]

3.7(b)(v) Wage Transparency

West Virginia law does not address whether an employer may prohibit employees from disclosing their wages or from discussing and inquiring about the wages of other employees.

3.7(b)(vi) Changing Regular Paydays or Pay Rate Under State Law

Changing Regular Paydays. Employers must give employees notice, in writing or through a posted notice maintained in a place accessible to employees, of a change to the day, hour, and place of payment, or pay period, at least one full pay period before a change occurs.[317] Note that the statute requires notice "prior to the time of changes," whereas the regulation requires notice "at least one full pay period prior to the effective date of the change."[318] The state labor department contends the latter standard applies.[319]

Changing Pay Rate. The same standards apply to changing an employee's rate of pay. Employers must give employees notice, in writing or through a posted notice maintained in a place accessible to employees, of pay rate changes at least one full pay period before a change occurs.[320] Again, the statute requires notice "prior to the time of changes," whereas the regulation requires notice "at least one full pay period prior to the effective date of the change."[321] The state labor department contends the latter standard applies.[322]

Other Changes. In addition to changes to pay rate, payday, and other wage payment requirements, the regulation requires advance notice of a change to "any other term of employment," which, based on its broad language and the statutory requirement that employers make available in writing or by posted notice practices and policies regarding vacation pay, sick leave, and comparable matters, could be interpreted to require notice of changes to these (or any) employment policies or practices.[323]

3.7(b)(vii) Paying for Expenses Under State Law

In West Virginia, there is no general obligation to indemnify an employee for business expenses. However, the law contains provisions specific to travel expenses and work uniforms.

Travel. Though the statute is silent concerning whether an employer must reimburse an employee for travel expenses, for purposes of determining an employee's regular rate when calculating overtime wage, reimbursements to the employee traveling expenses, or other expenses incurred by an employee when furthering an employer's interest, are excluded from an employee's regular rate.[324]

Uniforms. The cost of uniforms and their laundering, when an employer requires an employee to wear a uniform, cannot be credited against an employee's wages.[325]

3.7(b)(viii) Wage Deductions Under State Law

Permissible Deductions. Employees must be paid wages due, less "authorized deductions" or "authorized wage assignment."[326] Deductions include amounts:

- required by law to be withheld; and
- authorized for union, labor organization, or club dues or fees, pension plans, payroll savings plans, credit unions, charities and any form of insurance provided by an employer (with exceptions for public employees):
  - these deductions are not required to be in any prescribed form; and
  - concerning medical insurance, an insurance statute provides that an employer cannot deduct an employee's contribution without the employee's prior written consent.[327]

An employer may also be able to take a credit for meals made available to and eaten by employees, and living quarters provided to employees if a compulsory condition of employment (and other requirements are met).[328]

Prohibited Deductions. An illegal deduction is a deduction made by an employer from an employee's wages without a valid assignment of wages, without a valid wage garnishment order, or without an employee's written authorization for union or club dues, pension plans, a payroll savings plan, charitable contributions, insurance, a hospitalization plan, or plan of a similar kind. Moreover, if an employer deducts an authorized amount but fails to pay that amount to the designated entity, the deduction is illegal.[329]

An employer is also prohibited from taking a deduction from final wages for unreturned uniforms, equipment, or damaged property.[330]

Employers may, under certain circumstances, take deductions for unreturned property. If, at the time of discharge or resignation, an employee fails to return employer provided property, the employer may withhold, deduct, or divert the employee's final wages to recover the replacement cost of the property, subject to the following:

- the property was provided in the course of, and for use in, the employer's business;
- the property was valued at over $100; and
- the employee signed a written agreement contemporaneous with obtaining the property (or signed and ratified an agreement if property was provided prior to the effective date of the amended law) containing:
  - specific itemization of the property provided, including replacement cost;
  - clear statement that the property is to be returned immediately upon discharge or resignation; or

- clear statement, along with employee's acknowledgement and agreement, that should the employee fails to return the property, the replacement cost will be deducted from the employee's final wages.

At the time of discharge or resignation, the employer must notify the employee in writing by personal service (or as soon as practicable by personal service or via certified mail with return receipt requested) of the replacement cost of the property and must make a demand for the return of the property within a certain date, not to exceed 10 business days after the notification. If the employee objects to the cost in writing within the deadline, the employer must place the deducted amount into an interest bearing escrow account. If the employee does not bring a civil action or request equitable relief within three months, the employee forfeits the amount in escrow and it returns to the employer.

An employer must return the deducted wages to the employee if the employee returns the property in a suitable condition within the deadline. Uniforms returned within three years of their issuance are deemed to be acceptable in their current condition. Replacement tools, that is, equipment, other than uniforms, provided by the employer to the employee for use in the course of the employer's business to replace equipment provided by the employee that is lost, are deemed to be property of the employee and are not included within the law.

These requirements do not apply to employment relationships governed by a collective bargaining agreement.[331]

3.7(b)(ix) Wage Assignments & Wage Garnishments

Orders of Support. When an employer receives a court-ordered notice to withhold income from an employee's wages for child support, the employer must implement the income withholding no later than the first pay period or first date for the payment of income which occurs after 14 days following the date the notice was mailed.[332] The employer must withhold as much of the employee's income as is necessary to comply with the order authorizing withholding, up to the maximum amount permitted under applicable law for both current support and for any arrearages which are due.[333] The maximum amount that may be withheld is as follows:

- 40% of the employee's weekly disposable earnings if the employee is supporting a spouse and other dependent children;
- 45% of weekly disposable earnings if the employee is supporting dependents and is at least 12 weeks late in making support payments;
- 50% of weekly disposable earnings if the employee is not supporting dependents; and
- 55% for arrearages in support.[334]

The employer may also deduct a fee of up to $1 for administrative costs incurred by the source of income for each withholding.[335] The employer must send the withheld amounts to the state child enforcement agency on the same day the employee is paid.[336] If the employee's employment terminates, the employer is required to notify the state child enforcement agency and provide the employee's last known address and identity of the new employer, if known.[337]

Employers are prohibited from discharging, refusing to employ, or taking disciplinary action against an employee because their income is subject to support withholding.[338]

Debt Collection. An employer must comply with a court-ordered execution of a creditor's judgment against an employee's wages.[339] Payments in satisfaction of the garnishment must be made once every 90 days.[340] The maximum amount that may be withheld in satisfaction of the garnishment is the lesser of:

- 20% of the employee's disposable earnings; or
- the amount by which the employee's earnings exceed 50 times the federal minimum wage in effect at the time of withholding.[341]

Employers are prohibited from discharging or taking other forms of reprisal against an employee because the employee's income is subject to garnishment.[342]

3.7(b)(x) State Enforcement, Remedies & Penalties

The West Virginia Division of Labor enforces the state's minimum wage, overtime, and wage payment laws, and has the power to investigate and resolve wage claims from employees asserting violations of these laws.[343] If the division issues a final order finding that the employer is in violation, the employer must pay unpaid wages as ordered.[344] The division may also institute a civil action on behalf of aggrieved employees.[345]

Alternatively, an employee may elect to file a civil action against an employer for unpaid minimum wages or overtime or for wage payment violations.[346] An action alleging unpaid minimum wages and/or overtime must be filed within two years of the alleged violation.[347] An action alleging wage payment violations must be filed within one year of the alleged violation.[348] In a minimum wage or overtime case, a prevailing employee may recover unpaid wages for up to two years prior to the date the lawsuit was filed, as well as reasonable attorneys' fees and costs.[349] In a wage payment case, the employee may recover unpaid wages, reasonable attorneys' fees, and costs.[350]

Employers that violate the West Virginia wage and hour laws may also face criminal penalties. An employer that willfully violates the minimum wage and/or overtime provisions commits a misdemeanor, and upon conviction, will be fined up to $100.[351] Employers that violate any provision of the labor laws for which no penalty has been specifically provided—e.g., payment of regular and final wages, record keeping, posting, wage notice, wage deductions—commit a misdemeanor. If convicted, violators will be fined between $10 and $50, imprisoned up to six months, or both.[352]

3.8(a) Vacation Pay & Similar Paid Time Off

3.8(a)(i) Federal Guidelines on Vacation Pay & Similar Paid Time Off

To the extent an "employee welfare benefit plan" is established or maintained for the purpose of providing vacation benefits for participants or their beneficiaries, it may be governed under the federal Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA).[353] However, an employer program of compensating employees for vacation benefits out of the employer's general assets is not considered a covered welfare benefit plan.[354] Further, the U.S. Supreme Court, in Massachusetts v. Morash, noted that extensive state regulation of vesting, funding, and participation rights of vacation benefits may provide greater protections for employees than ERISA and, as a result, the court was reluctant to have ERISA preempt state law in situations where it was not clearly indicated.[355]

3.8(a)(ii) State Guidelines on Vacation Pay & Similar Paid Time Off

West Virginia law does not require an employer to offer employees other benefit compensation such as vacation pay, holiday pay, personal time off, bonuses, severance pay, or pensions. However, once an employer establishes a policy and promises vacation pay and other types of additional compensation, the employer may not arbitrarily withhold or withdraw these fringe benefits retroactively. It is important to draft clear, precise, and complete policies and procedures regarding these benefits, as they can become contractual obligations and subject the employer to liability if withheld or reduced without notice.

Guidance issued by the West Virginia Division of Labor expressly states that employers that do provide vacation and/or paid time off benefits "are responsible for establishing a written policy outlining how those benefits are earned and paid."[356] Moreover, employers must make available to employees, in writing or through a posted notice maintained in a place accessible to employees, employment practices and policies concerning vacation pay, sick leave, and comparable matters.[357] When an employer changes certain terms of employment, e.g., fringe benefits, the employer must furnish a written notice to affected employees at least one full pay period before the change's effective date.[358]

In West Virginia, the definition of wages includes then-accrued fringe benefits capable of calculation and payable directly to an employee, provided that the law does not require fringe benefits to be calculated contrary to any agreement between an employer and employees which does not contradict the provisions of the wage payment laws.[359] Fringe benefits include any benefit provided an employee or group of employees by an employer, or which is required by law, and includes:

- regular vacation;
- graduated vacation;
- floating vacation;
- holidays;
- sick leave; and
- personal leave.[360]

Wages due or wages earned means and includes all wages and fringe benefits accrued, if any, that are owed to an employee for all hours the employee is permitted, required, or suffered to work, up to and including the twelfth day immediately preceding the employer's regular pay day.[361]

Accordingly, once an employee has earned vacation time pursuant to an employer's policy, the earned vacation is deemed vested, and a change to the employer's policy cannot require an employee to lose vested vacation benefits:

> Although the employer may change their policy at any time to reduce or stop existing benefits, they cannot take back those benefits already earned under the previous policy. For example, an employer has the option to discontinue providing vacation benefits; however, they must allow their employees to use the vacation hours they've already earned.[362]

Nonetheless, because the provisions of an employer's vacation policy control the terms and conditions of vacation benefits,[363] employers may implement limits on accrual and use of vacation time.[364] For example, an employer may elect to cap vacation accrual or require vacation to be used within a certain period of time via a "use-it-or-lose-it" clause. Further, an employer's vacation policy may require forfeiture of accrued, unused vacation time upon termination. If fringe benefits are provided and due under an agreement between an employee and employer but, per the agreement's terms, are to be paid at a future date or upon additional conditions which are ascertainable, they must be paid per the agreement's terms and are not subject to the final wages statute's timing requirements.[365]

Notably, the Virginia Supreme Court has held that employees may not be entitled to payout of accrued, unused paid time off upon termination even in the absence of an agreement to do so. The court held "there must be an 'express agreement' between employer and employee that the employee is entitled to payment of a fringe benefit upon separation from employment."[366] Accordingly, if there is no employer policy granting employees "payment for unused, accumulated sick leave upon termination from employment, the unused, accumulated sick leave, upon termination from employment, is not a vested, nonforfeitable fringe benefit under the West Virginia Wage Payment and Collection Act and is not payable to the employees."[367]

3.8(b) Holidays & Days of Rest

3.8(b)(i) Federal Guidelines on Holidays & Days of Rest

There is no federal law requiring that employees be provided a day of rest each week, or be compensated at a premium rate for work performed on the seventh consecutive day of work or on holidays.

3.8(b)(ii) State Guidelines on Holidays & Days of Rest

West Virginia does not require employers to provide employees with a day of rest each week, or compensate employees at a premium rate for work performed on the seventh consecutive day of work or on holidays.

3.8(c) Recognition of Domestic Partnerships & Civil Unions

3.8(c)(i) Federal Guidelines on Domestic Partnerships & Civil Unions

Federal law does not regulate or define domestic partnerships and civil unions. States and municipalities are free to provide for domestic partnership and civil unions within their jurisdictions. Thus, whether a couple may register as domestic partners or enter into a civil union depends on their place of residence. States may also pass laws to regulate whether employee benefit plans must provide coverage for an employee's domestic partner or civil union partner.

Whether such state laws apply to an employer's benefit plans depends on whether the benefits are subject to ERISA. Most state and local laws that relate to an employer's provision of health benefit plans for employees are preempted by ERISA. Self-insured plans, for example, are preempted by ERISA. If the plan is preempted by ERISA, employers may not be required to comply with the states' directives on requiring coverage for domestic partners or parties to a civil union.[368] ERISA does not preempt state laws that regulate insurance, so employer health benefit plans that provide benefits pursuant to an insurance contract are subject to state laws requiring coverage for domestic partners or civil union partners.

The federal Comprehensive Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act (COBRA) requires group health plans to provide continuation coverage under the plan for a specified period of time to each qualified beneficiary who would lose coverage under the plan as a result of a qualifying event (e.g., the employee's death or termination from employment).[369] However, under COBRA, only an employee and the employee's spouse and dependent children are considered "qualified beneficiaries."[370] Here again, states may choose to extend continuation coverage requirements to domestic partners and civil union partners under state mini-COBRA statutes.

3.8(c)(ii) State Guidelines on Domestic Partnerships & Civil Unions

West Virginia does not recognize either domestic partnerships or civil unions. Accordingly, state law does not address the issue of whether an employee's domestic partner or civil union partner would be considered an eligible dependent for purposes of employee benefits.

- for the birth or placement of a child for adoption or foster care;[371]
- to care for an immediate family member (spouse, child, or parent) with a serious health condition;[372]
- to take medical leave when the employee is unable to work because of a serious health condition;[373]

A covered employer is engaged in commerce or in any industry or activity affecting commerce and has at least 50 employees in 20 or more workweeks in the current or preceding calendar year.[374] A covered employee has completed at least 12 months of employment and has worked at least 1,250 hours in the last 12 months at a location where 50 or more employees work within 75 miles of each other.[375] For information on the FMLA, see LITTLER ON LEAVES OF ABSENCE: FAMILY, MEDICAL & PREGNANCY LEAVES.

West Virginia law does not address family and medical leave for private-sector employees.

3.9(b) Paid Sick Leave

3.9(b)(i) Federal Guidelines on Paid Sick Leave

Federal law does not require private employers (that are not government contractors) to provide employees paid sick leave. Executive Order No. 13706 requires certain federal contractors and subcontractors to provide employees with a minimum of 56 hours of paid sick leave annually, to be accrued at a rate of at least one hour of paid sick leave for every 30 hours worked.[376] The paid sick leave requirement applies to certain contracts solicited—or renewed, extended, or amended—on or after January 1, 2017, including all contracts and subcontracts of any tier thereunder. For more information on this topic, see LITTLER ON GOVERNMENT CONTRACTORS & EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY OBLIGATIONS.

3.9(b)(ii) State Guidelines on Paid Sick Leave

West Virginia law does not address paid sick leave for private-sector employees.

3.9(c) Pregnancy Leave

3.9(c)(i) Federal Guidelines on Pregnancy Leave

Three federal statutes are generally implicated when handling leave related to pregnancy: the Pregnancy Discrimination Act, which amended Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 ("Title VII") in 1978; the Family and Medical Leave Act; and the Americans with Disabilities Act. For additional information, see LITTLER ON LEAVES OF ABSENCE: FAMILY, MEDICAL & PREGNANCY LEAVES.

Pregnancy Discrimination Act (PDA). Under the PDA, which as part of Title VII applies to employers with 15 or more employees, disabilities caused or contributed to by pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions must be treated the same as disabilities caused or contributed to by other medical conditions under an employer's health or disability insurance or sick leave plan.[377] Policies and practices involving such matters as the commencement and duration of leave, the availability of extensions, reinstatement, and payment under any health or disability insurance or sick leave plan must be applied to disability due to pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions on the same terms as they are applied to other disabilities.

An employer must allow individuals with physical limitations resulting from pregnancy to take leave on the same terms and conditions as others who are similar in their ability or inability to work. However, an employer may not compel an employee to take leave because the employee is pregnant, as long as the employee is able to perform their job. Moreover, an employer may not prohibit employees from returning to work for a set length of time after childbirth. Thus, employers must hold open a job for a pregnancy-related absence for the same length of time as jobs are held open for employees on sick or disability leave.

Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA). A pregnant employee may take FMLA leave intermittently for prenatal examinations or for the employee's own serious health condition, such as severe morning sickness.[378] FMLA leave may also be used for the birth or placement of a child; however, the use of intermittent leave (as opposed to leave taken on an intermittent or reduced schedule) is subject to the employer's approval.

Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA). Pregnancy-related impairments may constitute disabilities for purposes of the ADA. The federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) takes the position that leave is a reasonable accommodation for pregnancy-related impairments, and may be granted in addition to what an employer would normally provide under a sick leave policy for reasons related to the impairment.[379] An employee may also be allowed to take leave beyond the maximum FMLA leave if the additional leave would be considered a reasonable accommodation.

Several states provide greater protections for employees with respect to pregnancy. For example, states may have specific laws prohibiting discrimination based on pregnancy or providing separate protections for pregnant women, including the requirement that employers provide reasonable accommodations to pregnant employees to enable them to continue working during their pregnancies, provided that no undue hardship on the employer's business operations would result. These protections are discussed in 3.11(c). To the extent that a state law focuses primarily on providing job-protected leave for employees with disabling pregnancy-related health conditions, that state law is discussed below.

3.9(c)(ii) State Guidelines on Pregnancy Leave

As discussed in 3.11(c)(ii), West Virginia requires employers of 12 or more employees to make reasonable accommodations for applicants and employees who have limitations documented by a health care provider that stem from pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions. Specific to leave, an employer is prohibited from requiring an employee to take leave under any leave law or policy if another reasonable accommodation can be provided.[380]

3.9(g) Voting Time

3.9(g)(i) Federal Voting Time Guidelines

There is no federal law concerning time off to vote.

3.9(g)(ii) State Voting Time Guidelines

An employee who is entitled to vote and who does not have three or more hours off work to vote is eligible for up to three hours of paid time off to vote. An employer may not penalize an employee, nor take deductions from an employee's usual salary or wages, for taking such leave. However, if an employee with three or more hours off work to vote fails to vote during that time and requests and takes leave during work hours, time spent taking leave may be deducted from their wages or salary.

In essential government, health, hospital, transportation, and communications services, and in production, manufacturing, and processing works requiring continuity of operations, an employer may, after receiving a written demand for time off to vote, specify when leave may be taken, but leave must provide ample and convenient time and opportunity to vote.

Public Office. An individual elected or appointed to a part-time public office is entitled to a leave of absence from the individual's private employment to perform the duties of the public office. The employer is prohibited from imposing any penalty on the employee for taking such leave. Leave may be unpaid. The law does not apply to employers with five or fewer full-time employees on the days or portion of any day during which the employee in question is engaged in performing the duties of the public office.[382]

3.9(i) Leave to Participate in Judicial Proceedings

3.9(i)(i) Federal Guidelines on Leave to Participate in Judicial Proceedings

The Jury System Improvements Act prohibits employers from terminating or disciplining "permanent" employees due to their jury service in federal court.[383] Employers are under no federal statutory obligation to pay employees while serving on a jury.

Employers may verify that an employee's request for civic duty is legally obligated by requiring the employee to produce a copy of the summons, subpoena, or other documentation. Also, an employer can set reasonable advance notice requirements for jury duty leave. Upon completion of jury duty, an employee is entitled to reinstatement.

An employer also may be required to grant leave to employees who are summoned to testify, to assist, or to participate in hearings conducted by federal administrative agencies, as required by a variety of additional federal statutes.[384] For more information, see LITTLER ON LEAVES OF ABSENCE: MILITARY & CIVIC DUTY LEAVES.

3.9(i)(ii) State Guidelines on Leave to Participate in Judicial Proceedings

West Virginia employers may not discriminate against an employee by reducing compensation, terminating, or threatening to terminate the employee because the employee is absent from work due to a jury duty summons. However, an employer is not required to compensate an employee for time spent on jury service in the absence of a collective bargaining agreement or employment agreement requiring such payment.[385]

3.9(k) Military-Related Leave

3.9(k)(i) Federal Guidelines on Military-Related Leave

Two federal statutes primarily govern military-related leave: the Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act (USERRA) and the Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA). For more detailed information on these statutes, including notice and other requirements, see LITTLER ON LEAVES OF ABSENCE: MILITARY & CIVIC DUTY LEAVES.

USERRA. USERRA imposes obligations on all public and private employers to provide employees with leave to "serve" in the "uniformed services." USERRA also requires employers to reinstate employees returning from military leave who meet certain defined qualifications. An employer also may have an obligation to train or otherwise qualify those employees returning from military leave. USERRA guarantees employees a continuation of health benefits for the 24 months of military leave (at the employee's expense) and protects an employee's pension benefits upon return from leave. Finally, USERRA requires that employers not discriminate against an employee because of past, present, or future military obligations, among other things.

Some states provide greater protections for employees with respect to military leave. USERRA, however, establishes a "floor" with respect to the rights and benefits an employer is required to provide to an employee to take leave, return from leave, and be free from discrimination. Any state law that seeks to supersede, nullify, or diminish these rights is void under USERRA.[386]

FMLA. Under the FMLA, eligible employees may take leave for: (1) any "qualifying exigency" arising from the foreign deployment of the employee's spouse, son, daughter, or parent with the armed forces; or (2) to care for a next of kin servicemember with a serious injury or illness (referred to as "military caregiver leave").

1. Qualifying Exigency Leave. An eligible employee may take up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave in a single 12-month period if the employee's spouse, child, or parent is an active duty member of one of the U.S. armed forces' reserve components or National Guard, or is a reservist or

[386] USERRA provides that: (1) nothing within USERRA is intended to supersede, nullify, or diminish a right or benefit provided to an employee that is greater than the rights USERRA provides (38 U.S.C. § 4302(a)); and (2) USERRA supersedes any state law that would reduce, limit, or eliminate any right or benefit USERRA provides (38 U.S.C. § 4302(b)).

member of the National Guard who faces recall to active duty if a qualifying exigency exists.[387] An eligible employee may also take leave for a qualifying exigency if a covered family member is a member of the regular armed forces and is on duty, or called to active duty, in a foreign country.388 Notably, leave is only available for covered relatives of military members called to active federal service by the president and is not available for those in the armed forces recalled to state service by the governor of the member's respective state.

2. Military Caregiver Leave. An eligible employee may take up to 26 weeks of unpaid leave in a single 12-month period to care for a "covered servicemember" with a serious injury or illness if the employee is the servicemember's spouse, child, parent, or next of kin.

3.9(k)(ii) State Guidelines on Military-Related Leave

Members of the organized militia in the active service of West Virginia are entitled to the same reemployment rights under USERRA granted to members of the reserve components of the U.S. armed forces.[389] Organized militia means the West Virginia National Guard, the National Guard of another state, Army and Air National Guard, and the inactive National Guard, including a member, unit, component, element, headquarters, staff, or cadre thereof.[390]

Civil Air Patrol Leave. West Virginia employers of 15 or more employees must provide employees who are members of the Civil Air Patrol with a leave of absence:

- up to a maximum of 10 days per calendar year for training for an emergency mission of the West Virginia wing of the Civil Air Patrol; and
- up to a maximum of 30 days per calendar year for responding to an emergency mission of the West Virginia wing of the Civil Air Patrol.[391]

An employee is not required to exhaust all available leave or time off benefits before using Civil Air Patrol leave.[392]

To request Civil Air Patrol leave, the employee must give the employer:

- at least 14 days' notice of the intended dates of the beginning and end of leave together with an estimate of the amount of time needed to complete training; and
- as much notice as possible of the intended dates of the beginning and end of leave together with an estimate of the amount of time needed to complete an emergency mission.[393]

The employee must report necessary changes in the time required to complete the training or mission to the employer.[394]

The employer may require verification of the employee's eligibility for the Civil Air Patrol leave requested or taken. If the employee fails to provide the required verification, the employer may deny the Civil Air Patrol leave.[395]

Leave is unpaid. However, the statute does not prevent an employer from electing to provide paid leave.[396]

The use of Civil Air Patrol leave may not result in the loss of an employee benefit accrued before the first date of leave.[397] An employer and an employee may negotiate for the employer to pay for the benefits of the employee during the leave, but the employer is not required to continue or maintain employee benefits for any employee eligible for Civil Air Patrol leave if the employee would not be otherwise eligible for any benefit under the employer's policies or the content of any employee benefit plan that regulates eligibility for benefits.[398]

When the employee returns to work, the employer must restore the employee to the position s/he held when the leave began or to a position with equivalent seniority status, benefits, pay and conditions of employment. An employer may decline to restore an employee as required under the statute because of circumstances unrelated to the use of Civil Air Patrol leave.[399]

The statute also prohibits discrimination on the basis of an employee's Civil Air Patrol membership. Employers are prohibited from discriminating against or discharging an employee who has been employed for a minimum of 90 days and is a member of the Civil Air Patrol because of the employee's membership in the Civil Air Patrol.[400] An employer may not discharge, fine, suspend, expel, discipline or in any other manner discriminate against an employee who is a member of the Civil Air Patrol because that employee complies with the provisions of the statute or opposes a practice not in compliance with the statute.[401]

Other Military-Related Protections: Spousal Unemployment. An individual who has voluntarily quit employment to accompany a spouse serving in active military service who has been reassigned from one military assignment to another is not disqualified for benefits due to voluntarily quitting. The account of the employer of such an individual may not be charged.[402]

3.9(l) Other Leaves

3.9(l)(i) Federal Guidelines on Other Leaves

There are no federal statutory requirements for other categories of leave for private-sector employees.

3.9(l)(ii) State Guidelines on Other Leaves

Volunteer Emergency Responder Leave. An employer may not terminate or otherwise discriminate against an employee who is a volunteer firefighter or member of a volunteer emergency medical services and who is late or absent from work to respond to an emergency. The leave may be unpaid, but the employee must provide upon request a statement from a supervisor of the time, date, and employee's response to the emergency.

An emergency includes going to, attending, or coming from:

- a fire call;
- a hazardous or toxic materials spill and cleanup;
- a motor vehicle accident; or
- any other situation to which their fire department or emergency medical service entity has been or later could be dispatched.[403]

3.10 Workplace Safety

3.10(a) Occupational Safety and Health

3.10(a)(i) Fed-OSH Act Guidelines

The federal Occupational Safety and Health Act ("Fed-OSH Act") requires every employer to keep their places of employment safe and free from recognized hazards likely to cause death or serious harm to employees.[404] Employers are also required to comply with all applicable occupational safety and health standards.[405] To enforce these standards, the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration ("Fed-OSHA") is authorized to carry out workplace inspections and investigations and to issue citations and assess penalties. The Fed-OSH Act also requires employers to adopt reporting and record-keeping requirements related to workplace accidents. For more information on this topic, see LITTLER ON WORKPLACE SAFETY.

Note that the Fed-OSH Act encourages states to enact their own state safety and health plans. Among the criteria for state plan approval is the requirement that the state plan provide for the development and enforcement of state standards that are at least as effective in providing workplace protection as are [404] 29 U.S.C. § 654(a)(1). An employer is defined as "a person engaged in a business affecting commerce that has employees." 29 U.S.C. § 652(5). The definition of employer does not include federal or state agencies (except for the U.S. House of Representatives and Senate). Under some state plans, however, state agencies may be subject to the state safety and health plan.

comparable standards under the federal law.[406] Some state plans, however, are more comprehensive than the federal program or otherwise differ from the Fed-OSH Act.

3.10(a)(ii) State-OSH Act Guidelines

West Virginia, under agreement with Fed-OSHA, operates its own state occupational safety and health program in accordance with section 18 of the Fed-OSH Act.[407] Thus, West Virginia is a so-called "state plan" jurisdiction, with its own detailed rules for occupational safety and health that parallel, but are separate from, Fed-OSHA standards. However, West Virginia's plan applies only to public-sector employees.[408] West Virginia does not have an approved state plan directed to private-sector employees. Accordingly, private employers must abide by the Fed-OSH Act.

3.10(b) Cell Phone & Texting While Driving Prohibitions

3.10(b)(i) Federal Guidelines on Cell Phone & Texting While Driving

Federal law does not address cell phone use or texting while driving.

3.10(b)(ii) State Guidelines on Cell Phone & Texting While Driving

In West Virginia, drivers are prohibited from using stand-alone electronic devices and wireless telecommunications devices. A stand-alone electronic device means portable device other than a wireless telecommunications device which stores audio or video data files to be retrieved on demand by a user. A wireless telecommunications device means any of the following:

- cellular phone;
- portable telephone;
- text messaging device;
- personal digital assistant;
- stand-alone computer, tablet, laptop, or notebook computer;
- global positioning receiver;
- device used to display a video, movie, broadcast television image, or visual image; or
- substantially similar communication device used to initiate or receive communication, information, or data.

It does not include a radio, citizens band radio, citizens band radio hybrid, commercial two-way radio communication device or its functional equivalent, subscription-based emergency communication device, prescribed medical device, amateur or ham radio device, or in-vehicle security, navigation, communications or remote diagnostics system, nor a variety of radios.

Under the law, an individual is prohibited from doing the following while operating a motor vehicle:

- holding or supporting, with any part of their body, a wireless communication device or stand-alone communication device;
- writing, sending, or reading any text-based communication, including, but not limited to, a text message, instant message, e-mail, or social media interaction on a wireless telecommunications device or stand-alone electronic device;
- making any communication, including a phone call, voice message, or one-way voice communication;
- engaging in any form of electronic data retrieval or electronic data communication on a wireless telecommunications device or stand-alone electronic device;
- manually entering letters, numbers, or symbols into any website, search engine, or application on a wireless telecommunications device or stand-alone electronic device;
- watching a video or movie on a wireless telecommunications device or standalone electronic device other than watching data related to the navigation of such vehicle;
- recording, posting, sending, or broadcasting video, including a video conference on a wireless telecommunications device or stand-alone electronic device; and
- playing any game on a wireless telecommunications device or standalone electronic device.

The law does not prohibit writing, sending, or reading any text-based communication, including text messages, instant messages, e-mails, or social media interactions, if it is done by a voice-operated or hands-free communication feature that is automatically converted by such device to be sent as a message in a written form. In addition, individuals may make communications, including a phone call, voice message, or one-way voice communication if they use a voice operated or hands-free communication feature or function. Additional exceptions apply.[409]

These prohibitions apply to employees driving for work purposes and could expose an employer to liability. Employers therefore should be cognizant of, and encourage compliance with, state law.

3.10(c) Firearms in the Workplace

3.10(c)(i) Federal Guidelines on Firearms on Employer Property

Federal law does not address firearms in the workplace.

3.10(c)(ii) State Guidelines on Firearms on Employer Property

In West Virginia, an employer may prohibit open or concealed carry of any firearm or deadly weapon on property under the employer's control.[410] Nonetheless, an employer cannot prohibit any customer, employee, or invitee from possessing any legally owned firearm, when the firearm is:

- lawfully possessed;
- out of view;
- locked inside or locked to a motor vehicle in a parking lot; and

- when the customer, employee, or invitee is lawfully allowed to be present in that area.[411]

Locked inside or locked to means:

- the vehicle is locked;
- the firearm is in a locked trunk, glove box, or other interior compartment;
- the firearm is in a locked container securely fixed to the vehicle; or
- the firearm is secured and locked to the vehicle itself by the use of some form of attachment and lock.[412]

Motor vehicle does not include vehicles owned, rented, or leased by an employer and used by the employee in the course of employment.[413]

An employer cannot violate the privacy rights of a customer, employee, or invitee either by:

- verbal or written inquiry, regarding the presence or absence of a firearm locked inside or locked to a motor vehicle in a parking lot (note: this provision is repealed effective June 6, 2024)[414]; or
- conducting an actual search of a motor vehicle in a parking lot to ascertain the presence of a firearm within the vehicle.

However, on-duty law enforcement personnel may conduct a search of a motor vehicle in a parking lot to ascertain the presence of a firearm within the vehicle in accordance with statutory and constitutional protections.[415]

The law also prohibits retaliation for carrying or storing a firearm within the parameters of state law. An employer cannot remove a customer, employee, or invitee because the person stored a firearm inside a motor vehicle in a parking lot, nor may an employer terminate an employee or take other adverse employment action against an employee for such storage, except in cases of threats of unlawful action.[416]

An employer cannot condition employment upon either:

- the fact that an employee or prospective employee holds or does not hold a West Virginia firearm license; or
- an agreement with an employee or a prospective employee prohibiting that natural person from keeping a legal firearm locked inside or locked to a motor vehicle in a parking lot when the firearm is kept for lawful purposes.[417]

An employer cannot prohibit or attempt to prevent any customer, employee, or invitee from entering the parking lot of the place of business because the customer's, employee's, or invitee's motor vehicle contains a legal firearm being carried for lawful purposes that is out of view within the customer's, employee's, or invitee's motor vehicle.[418]

The law also creates immunity from liability related to the presence of firearms on a business premises. An employer has no duty of care relative to the above provisions related to firearms stored in vehicles in the employer's parking lot, and is not liable in a civil action for money damages based upon any actions or inactions taken in compliance with those provisions.[419]

3.10(d) Smoking in the Workplace

3.10(d)(i) Federal Guidelines on Smoking in the Workplace

Federal law does not address smoking in the workplace.

3.10(d)(ii) State Guidelines on Smoking in the Workplace

3.10(e)(i) Federal Guidelines on Suitable Seating for Employees

Federal law does not address suitable seating requirements for employees.

3.10(e)(ii) State Guidelines on Suitable Seating for Employees

West Virginia is one of the few remaining states with a suitable seating law. In West Virginia, employers that employ females in any factory, mercantile establishment, mill, or workshop must provide a reasonable number of suitable seats for said employees to use. Employers must permit the use of seats when employees are not necessarily engaged in active duties of employment. Employers must permit the use of seats at all times when such use would not actually and necessarily interfere with the proper discharge of the employee's duties. If practicable, seats must be made permanent fixtures and may be so constructed or adjusted that, when not in use, they will not obstruct female employees when engaged in the performance of their duties.[421]

3.10(f) Workplace Violence Protection Orders

3.10(f)(i) Federal Guidelines on Workplace Violence Protection Orders

Federal law does not address employer workplace violence protection orders. That is, there is no federal statute addressing whether or how employers might obtain a legal order (such as a temporary restraining order) on their own behalf, or on behalf of their employees or visitors, to protect against workplace violence, threats, or harassment.

3.11(a) Protected Classes & Other Fair Employment Practices Protections

3.11(a)(i) Federal FEP Protections

The federal equal employment opportunity laws that apply to most employers include: (1) Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 ("Title VII");[422] (2) the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA);[423] (3) the Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA);[424] (4) the Equal Pay Act;[425] (5) the Genetic Information Nondiscrimination Act of 2009 (GINA);[426] (6) the Civil Rights Acts of 1866 and 1871;[427] and (7) the Civil Rights Act of 1991. As a result of these laws, federal law prohibits discrimination in employment on the basis of:

- color;
- national origin (includes ancestry);
- religion;
- sex (includes pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions, and pursuant to the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in Bostock v. Clayton County, Georgia, includes sexual orientation and gender identity);[428]

West Virginia law prohibits an employer from discriminating against an individual on the basis of:

- race;
- religion;

- national origin;
- ancestry;
- sex;
- age (40+);
- blindness;
- disability;

West Virginia's Human Rights Commission enforces the state's discrimination laws. Employees have 365 days from the date of the discriminatory act to file a verified complaint with the Commission.[434] The respondent has 10 days to reply to the complaint.[435] The Commission will then investigate the complaint. If it determines that no probable cause exists, it will notify the complainant, who may then request to meet with the Commission to show probable cause. If the Commission determines that probable cause exists, it will confer with the parties to try to eliminate the discriminatory practice through conference, conciliation, and persuasion. If the Commission is not satisfied that the practice has been eliminated, it can require the employer to appear at a hearing.[436] At the hearing, the Commission may order the employer to perform a variety of remedies, or may dismiss the complaint.[437] Either party may appeal the Commission's findings.[438]

Tobacco Products. An employer may not discharge or refuse to hire an employee, or otherwise discriminate against an employee solely because the individual uses tobacco products off the employer's premises during nonworking hours. Employers may offer smokers and other tobacco users programs free of charge or at reduced rates, which encourage the reduction or cessation of smoking or tobacco use.

This provision does not prohibit an employer from offering a health, disability, or life insurance policy which makes distinctions between employees as to type or price of coverage based upon the employee's use of tobacco products. However, any differential premium rates charged to employees must reflect the differential cost to the employer. Moreover, the employer must provide employees with a statement stating the differential rates used by its insurance carriers.[439]

All employers are covered under the statute except nonprofit organizations that discourage the use of one or more tobacco products by the public as one of their primary purposes or objectives.[440]

An employer may not discharge, fine, suspend, expel, discipline or in any other manner discriminate against a member of the Civil Air Patrol because of their compliance with the provisions of the act or opposes a practice not in compliance with the act.[441]

Protections for Vaccine Exemptions. West Virginia law protects employees and prospective employees from discrimination in employment for exercising either a medical or religious exemption to a COVID-19 vaccine mandate. The law is applicable to any business entity engaged in business in West Virginia.[442]

3.11(a)(v) Local FEP Protections

In addition to the federal and state laws, employers with operations in Charleston are subject to the local fair employment practices ordinance.

Protected classifications include: race, including discrimination based on hair texture or protective hairstyle; religion; color; national origin; ancestry; sex; age; blindness; handicap; familial status; and sexual orientation.[443] The antidiscrimination protections apply to employers with12 or more employees within the city.[444] Any individual that has been aggrieved by an alleged unlawful discriminatory practice can file a complaint with the commission within 365 days after the alleged act of discrimination.[445]

3.11(b) Equal Pay Protections

3.11(b)(i) Federal Guidelines on Equal Pay Protections

The Equal Pay Act requires employers to pay male and female employees equal wages for substantially equal jobs. Specifically, the law prohibits employers covered under the federal Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) from discriminating between employees within the "same establishment on the basis of sex by paying wages to employees at a rate less than the rate at which the employer pays wages to employees of the opposite sex for equal work on jobs—"the performance of which requires equal skill, effort, and responsibility, and which are performed under similar working conditions."[446] The prohibition does not apply to payments made under: (1) a seniority system; (2) a merit system; (3) a system that measures earnings by quantity or quality of production; or (4) a differential based on a factor other than sex.

An employee alleging a violation of the Equal Pay Act must first exhaust administrative remedies by filing a complaint with the EEOC within 180 days of the alleged unlawful employment practice. Under the federal Lilly Ledbetter Fair Pay Act of 2009, for purposes of the statute of limitations for a claim arising under the Equal Pay Act, an unlawful employment practice occurs with respect to discrimination in compensation when: (1) a discriminatory compensation decision or other practice is adopted; (2) an individual becomes subject to such a decision or practice; or (3) an individual is affected by application of such decision or practice, including each time wages, benefits, or other compensation is paid, resulting in whole or in part from such a decision or other practice.[447]

3.11(b)(ii) State Guidelines on Equal Pay Protections

West Virginia law prohibits employers from discriminating in any manner between the sexes in the payment of wages for comparable work which requires comparable skills or paying employees of one sex at a lesser rate than employees of the opposite sex for comparable work which requires comparable skills.[448] However, differences in pay are permitted where the difference is based on: (1) a seniority or merit system that does not discriminate on the basis of sex; or (2) a differential based on good faith factors other than sex. An employer cannot reduce an employee's wages in order to eliminate an existing, past, or future wage discrimination or to effectuate wage equalization.

Notably, this law does not apply to employers whose operations are subject to any federal law related to equal wages for equal work, regardless of sex.

An employee alleging a violation may file a civil action within one year of the alleged violation.[449]

3.11(c) Pregnancy Accommodation

3.11(c)(i) Federal Guidelines on Pregnancy Accommodation

As discussed in 3.9(c)(i), the federal Pregnancy Discrimination Act (PDA), which amended Title VII, the Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA), and the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) may be implicated in determining the extent to which an employer is required to accommodate an employee's pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions.

Additionally, the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act (PWFA) makes it an unlawful employment practice for an employer of 15 or more employees to:

- fail or refuse to make reasonable accommodations for the known limitations related to the pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions of a qualified employee, unless the employer can demonstrate that the accommodation would impose an undue hardship on its business operations;
- require a qualified employee affected by pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions to accept an accommodation other than any reasonable accommodation arrived at through the interactive process;
- deny employment opportunities to a qualified employee, if the denial is based on the employer's need to make reasonable accommodations for the qualified employee;
- require a qualified employee to take leave, whether paid or unpaid, if another reasonable accommodation can be provided; or
- take adverse action related to the terms, conditions, or privileges of employment against a qualified employee because the employee requested or used a reasonable accommodation.[450]

A reasonable accommodation is any change or adjustment to a job, work environment, or the way things are usually done that would allow an individual with a disability to apply for a job, perform job functions, or enjoy equal access to benefits available to other employees. Reasonable accommodation includes:

- modifications to the job application process that allow a qualified applicant with a known limitation under the PWFA to be considered for the position;
- modifications to the work environment, or to the circumstances under which the position is customarily performed;
- modifications that enable an employee to enjoy equal benefits and privileges of employment as are enjoyed by other similarly situated employees without known limitations; or
- temporary suspension of an employee's essential job function(s).[451]

The PWFA also provides for reasonable accommodations related to lactation, as described in 3.4(a)(iii).

An employee seeking a reasonable accommodation must request an accommodation.[452] To request a reasonable accommodation, the employee or the employee's representative need only communicate to the employer that the employee needs an adjustment or change at work due to their limitation resulting from a physical or mental condition related to pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions. The employee must also participate in a timely, good faith interactive process with the employer to determine an effective reasonable accommodation.[453] An employee is not required to accept an accommodation. However, if the employee rejects a reasonable accommodation, and, as a result of that rejection, cannot perform (or apply to perform) an essential function of the position, the employee will not be considered "qualified."[454]

An employer is not required to seek documentation from an employee to support the employee's request for accommodation but may do so when it is reasonable under the circumstances for the employer to determine whether the employee has a limitation within the meaning of the PWFA and needs an adjustment or change at work due to the limitation.

Reasonable accommodation is not required if providing the accommodation would impose an undue hardship on the employer's business operations. An undue hardship is an action that fundamentally alters the nature or operation of the business or is unduly costly, extensive, substantial, or disruptive. When determining whether an accommodation would impose an undue hardship, the following factors are considered:

- the nature and net cost of the accommodation;
- the overall financial resources of the employer;
- the number of employees employed by the employer;
- the number, type, and location of the employer's facilities; and
- the employer's operations, including:
  - the composition, structure, and functions of the workforce; and
  - the geographic separateness and administrative or fiscal relationship of the facility where the accommodation will be provided.[455]

The following modifications do not impose an undue hardship under the PWFA when they are requested as workplace accommodations by a pregnant employee:

- allowing an employee to carry or keep water near and drink, as needed;
- allowing an employee to take additional restroom breaks, as needed;
- allowing an employee whose work requires standing to sit and whose work requires sitting to stand, as needed; and
- allowing an employee to take breaks to eat and drink, as needed.[456]

The PWFA expressly states that it does not limit or preempt the effectiveness of state-level pregnancy accommodation laws. State pregnancy accommodation laws are often specific in terms of outlining an employer's obligations and listing reasonable accommodations that an employer should consider if they do not cause an undue hardship on the employer's business.

Where a state law focuses primarily on providing job-protected leave for pregnancy or childbirth—as opposed to a pregnancy accommodation—it is discussed in 3.9(c)(ii). For more information on these topics, see LITTLER ON LEAVES OF ABSENCE: FAMILY, MEDICAL & PREGNANCY LEAVES.

3.11(c)(ii) State Guidelines on Pregnancy Accommodation

Under West Virginia's Pregnant Workers Fairness Act, employers of 12 or more employees must make reasonable accommodations for applicants and employees who have limitations documented by a health care provider that stem from pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions. Reasonable accommodations include:

- making facilities readily accessible to and usable by employees;
- job restructuring;
- part-time or modified work schedules;
- reassignment to a vacant position;
- modified work policies or procedures;
- bathroom breaks;
- breaks for increased water intake;
- periodic rest;
- assistance with manual labor;
- providing time off for prenatal appointments;
- temporary transfer to a less strenuous or hazardous position;
- allowing for more time or more frequent eating; and
- allowing time for taking prescribed medications.[457]

An employer must provide reasonable accommodation unless the accommodation would impose an undue hardship on the employer's business operations.

The applicant or employee must provide written documentation from a health care provider that specifies the applicant's or employee's limitations and suggesting what accommodations would address those limitations.[458] Under the Act, an employer cannot:

- deny employment opportunities to an applicant or employee, if the denial is based on the employer's refusal to make reasonable accommodations to the known limitations related to an employee's pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions;
- require an applicant or employee affected by pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions to accept an accommodation that she chooses not to accept; or
- require an employee to take leave under any leave law or policy of the covered entity if another reasonable accommodation can be provided.[459]

3.11(d) Harassment Prevention Training & Education Requirements

3.11(d)(i) Federal Guidelines on Antiharassment Training

While not expressly mandated by federal statute or regulation, training on equal employment opportunity topics—i.e., discrimination, harassment, and retaliation—has become de facto mandatory for employers.[460] Multiple decisions of the U.S. Supreme Court[461] and subsequent lower court decisions have made clear that an employer that does not conduct effective training: (1) will be unable to assert the affirmative defense that it exercised reasonable care to prevent and correct harassment; and (2) will subject itself to the risk of punitive damages. EEOC guidance on employer liability reinforces the important role that training plays in establishing a legal defense to harassment and discrimination claims.[462] Training for all employees, not just managerial and supervisory employees, also demonstrates an employer's "good faith efforts" to prevent harassment. For more information on harassment claims and employee training, see LITTLER ON HARASSMENT IN THE WORKPLACE and LITTLER ON EMPLOYEE TRAINING.

3.11(d)(ii) State Guidelines on Antiharassment Training

While there are no state law requirements, West Virginia law encourages employers to take all steps necessary to prevent sexual harassment from occurring by taking preventative measures such as (but not limited to):

- expressing strong disapproval of sexual harassment;
- developing and implementing appropriate sanctions;
- informing employees of their right to be free from harassment and the appropriate steps to take if harassment occurs; and
- developing methods to sensitize all employees regarding appropriate behavior in the workplace.[463]

3.12 Miscellaneous Provisions

3.12(a) Whistleblower Claims

3.12(a)(i) Federal Guidelines on Whistleblowing

Protections for whistleblowers can be found in dozens of federal statutes. The federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration ("Fed-OSHA") administers over 20 whistleblower laws, many of which have little or nothing to do with safety or health. Although the framework for many of the Fed-OSHA-administered statutes is similar (e.g., several of them follow the regulations promulgated under the Wendell H. Ford Aviation Investment and Reform Act (AIR21)), each statute has its own idiosyncrasies, including who is covered, timeliness of the complaint, standard of proof regarding nexus of protected activity, appeal or objection rights, and remedies available. For more information on whistleblowing protections, see LITTLER ON WHISTLEBLOWING & RETALIATION.

3.12(a)(ii) State Guidelines on Whistleblowing

West Virginia does not have a general whistleblower law providing protections for private-sector whistleblowers, although there are whistleblower protections for public employees.[464]

Like many states, West Virginia law makes it unlawful for an employer to discriminate against any individual because the individual has opposed any practices or acts or has filed a complaint, testified, or assisted in proceedings under the state's fair employment practices law.[465] Likewise, West Virginia law protects employees that make a complaint to an employer or to the Commissioner of Labor, institute a civil action, or testify in a proceeding under the state's minimum wage and maximum hours laws.[466]

3.12(b) Labor Laws

3.12(b)(i) Federal Labor Laws

Labor law refers to the body of law governing employer relations with unions. The National Labor Relations Act (NLRA)[467] and the Railway Labor Act (RLA)[468] are the two main federal laws governing employer relations with unions in the private sector. The NLRA regulates labor relations for virtually all private-sector employers and employees, other than rail and air carriers and certain enterprises owned or controlled by such carriers, which are covered by the RLA. The NLRA's main purpose is to: (1) protect employees' right to engage in or refrain from concerted activity (i.e., group activities attempting to improve working conditions) through representation by labor unions; and (2) regulate the collective bargaining process by which employers and unions negotiate the terms and conditions of union members' employment. The National Labor Relations Board (NLRB or "Board") enforces the NLRA and is responsible for conducting union elections and enforcing the NLRA's prohibitions against "unfair" conduct by employers and unions (referred to as unfair labor practices). For more information on union organizing and collective bargaining rights under the NLRA, see LITTLER ON UNION ORGANIZING and LITTLER ON COLLECTIVE BARGAINING.

Labor policy in the United States is determined, to a large degree, at the federal level because the NLRA preempts many state laws. Yet, significant state-level initiatives remain. For example, right-to-work laws are state laws that grant workers the freedom to join or refrain from joining labor unions and prohibit mandatory union dues and fees as a condition of employment.

3.12(b)(ii) Notable State Labor Laws

West Virginia is a right-to-work state. Employees may not be required to become or remain a member of a union, pay dues of any kind, or pay any third party or charity in lieu of those payments.[469]

4. END OF EMPLOYMENT

4.1 Plant Closings & Mass Layoffs

4.1(a) Federal WARN Act

The federal Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification (WARN) Act requires a covered employer to give 60 days' notice prior to: (1) a plant closing involving the termination of 50 or more employees at a single site of employment due to the closure of the site or one or more operating units within the site; or (2) a mass layoff involving either 50 or more employees, provided those affected constitute 33% of those working at the single site of employment, or at least 500 employees (regardless of the percentage of the workforce they constitute).[470] The notice must be provided to affected nonunion employees, the representatives of affected unionized employees, the state's dislocated worker unit, and the local government where the closing or layoff is to occur.[471] There are exceptions that either reduce or eliminate notice requirements. For more information on the WARN Act, see LITTLER ON REDUCTIONS IN FORCE.

4.1(b) State Mini-WARN Act

West Virginia does not have a mini-WARN law requiring advance notice to employees of a plant closing.

4.1(c) State Mass Layoff Notification Requirements

West Virginia does not require that an employer notify the state unemployment insurance department or another department in the event of a mass layoff.

4.2 Documentation to Provide When Employment Ends

Health Benefits: Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act (COBRA)	Under COBRA, the administrator of a covered group health plan must provide written notice to each covered employee and spouse of the covered employee (if any) of the right to continuation coverage provided under the plan.[472] The notice must be provided not later than the earlier of: • the date that is 90 days after the date on which the individual's coverage under the plan commences or, if later, the date that is 90 days after the date on which the plan first becomes subject to the continuation coverage requirements; or

Health Benefits, Mini-COBRA, etc.	West Virginia state law requires employers to provide post-termination continued coverage for up to 18 months. However, the law does not require such employers to provide notification of continued coverage to an employee upon termination.[474]
Unemployment Notice	Generally. West Virginia requires that employees be provided notice about unemployment benefits when employment ends. Additionally, the employer generally must post and maintain notice (Form WVUC-B-59) for employees about unemployment compensation, which describes eligibility requirements, includes a benefits rate table, and indicates how to apply for benefits.[475]
Wage Payment: Notice of Employer's Authorized Representative	Upon separation or with the issuance of the final paycheck, the employer must notify the employee in writing who the employer's authorized representative is and where to send a written demand for underpayment or nonpayment of wages and fringe benefits due upon separation, by both email and regular mail.[476]

4.3 Providing References for Former Employees

4.3(a) Federal Guidelines on References

Federal law does not specifically address providing former employees with references.

4.3(b) State Guidelines on References

West Virginia law presumes that any employer that discloses job-related information that may be reasonably considered to be adverse about a former or current employee to a prospective employer is acting in good faith. Job-related information means information about a person's education, training, experience, qualifications, conduct, and job performance offered to provide criteria to evaluate the person's suitability for employment.[477]

Employers are therefore immune from civil liability for the disclosure or consequences of the disclosure. Employers must provide any such disclosure in writing and must give a copy of the disclosure to the current or former employee at the time of disclosure.[478]
